$425,000 more for Victoria

B.C. to pay taxes in full to municipalities

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Starting next year, the provincial government will pay full municipal taxes on all its property holdings, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Wednesday.

For years, municipalities have been pressuring the provincial government to pay full municipal taxes, instead of the 15-mill grant in lieu of taxes.

In his inaugural address two years ago, Victoria Mayor Michael Young called the government the province's biggest "corporate welfare bum."

Now, Victoria is among the municipalities who stand to gain most from the additional revenue source.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of city council's finance committee, said in an interview from Vernon that the city will get an estimated $425,000 in additional revenue as a result of the government's decision to pay full municipal taxes.

Glazier said the amount was equivalent to about 2.5 mills. This year, under the 15-mill grant structure, the government paid $774,000 to the city in lieu of property taxes.

Glazier said next year's anticipated revenue from taxes paid by the provincial government was $1.2 million.

Originally, it was estimated that the provincial government would pay more than $2 million to the city if it assumed its fair tax burden.

But Glazier explained that this amount would be reduced because of amendments to the Assessment Act. Changes in that act will result in assessment of all property in B.C. on a certain percentage of market value.

Commercial property will be assessed at 25 per cent of its market value.

Under existing legislation, the provincial government pays 15 mills on 50 per cent of the assessed value of all its holdings.

Since commercial property is to be assessed at 25 per cent of market value, the 15-mill grant would have produced only half the revenue.

Starting next year, the province will pay the going 48-mill rate on 25 per cent of market value.

Glazier said although the change would produce less than was expected, it would "make for a very fair and equitable bottom line."

The provincial government would pay no more and no less than any other property owner in the city and that, he said, was "very, very welcome news."

Embattled Lance resigns

Back to Georgia —AP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, his voice choked with emotion, announced Bert Lance's resignation Wednesday, saying his close friend and budget director decided independently to step aside and "I think he's made the right decision."

In a televised news conference delayed two hours so Lance could compose his farewell letter, Carter acknowledged some of the allegations against Lance were true, but placed much of the blame on the "extraordinary standards" his administration had tried to set.

Although the president said he agreed with Lance's decision to return to Georgia after eight months in the administration, he paid strong tribute to the 46-year-old banker whom he considered irreplaceable. He did not name a successor immediately.

Lance, in a letter Carter read at the news conference, said his conscience remained clear and he still felt he could be an effective budget director.

But, noting the continuing controversy surrounding his name, Lance said: "I have to ask the question: At what price do I remain?"

"I am convinced that I can continue to be an effective director of the Office of Management and Budget," Lance said. "However, because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it, I have decided to submit my resignation as director of OMB. "I desire to return to my native state of Georgia."

'Right decision'

Said Carter: "Bert Lance is my friend. I know him personally as well as if he was my own brother. I know him . . . to be a good and an honorable man . . nothing that I have heard or read has shaken my belief in Bert's ability and integrity."

'At what price do I remain?'

Carter said Lance's resignation was "a courageous and also a patriotic decision . . . I don't think there is any way I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance who would be as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he's been."

Lance has been under intense pressure to resign for several weeks because of allegations stemming from his years as a Georgia bank executive. He acknowledged incurring large bank overdrafts and other problems.

Peace troop swap hinted

Canada might leave Cyprus for Rhodesia

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada might be willing to exchange its role in the Cyprus peacekeeping force for participation in a new United Nations group in Rhodesia, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Wednesday.

But the external affairs minister told reporters Ottawa remains against taking on new responsibilities in Rhodesia to add to peacekeeping duties in the Middle East and Cyprus.

He said Canada opposed having a Commonwealth force in Rhodesia.

Jamieson said Canada had a strong influence on the British proposal for a UN force and administrator to facilitate transition to majority black rule in Rhodesia. It has not yet been accepted by the Rhodesian government.

The proposal is the "only one that can work short of bloodshed," he said, noting that some aspects of the proposal remain difficult to swallow for the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia.

Jamieson was outlining his plans for the fall which include talks with British Foreign Secretary David Owen about problems in southern Africa. He is to meet Owen while visiting the United Nations this weekend.

Jamieson said a peaceful transition to black majority rule virtually depends on Smith's acceptance of the British proposal.

Along with the UN transitional group, Britain has proposed that Rhodesian troops and black liberation forces be disarmed and dispersed at the same time.

Canada strongly opposed the original British proposal for a Commonwealth force in Rhodesia because Ottawa saw prospects of a "potential Vietnam," he said. But he indicated he saw less danger of that with a broader-based UN group.

Israelis step up Lebanon stabs

Reuter

Rockets fired from Lebanese territory hit northern Israel on Wednesday as sources in Lebanon reported new Israeli incursions into war-torn southern Lebanon.

The sources said Israeli forces set up three fortified positions in Lebanon as fighting continued between the leftist-Palestinian alliance and Israeli-backed Lebanese rightists close to the border with Israel.

The move brought the number of Israeli fortified positions across the frontier to six, all overlooking villages held by the right-wing Christians, the sources said.

Israeli officials maintained silence about the reports of new Israeli advances into Lebanon and correspondents' reports from the border area were strictly censored.

A spokesman for the Palestinian commandos said Israeli gunboats were blockading the south Lebanese port of Tyre.

Meanwhile, an Israeli spokesman said Katyusha rockets, a type used by guerrilla forces, landed on the Israeli town of Safad, about 15 kilometres from the Lebanese frontier. Two persons were injured by flying glass as residents rushed to air-raid shelters.

A few hours later more rockets fell on Ramat Alma, a few kilometres north of Safad, a spokesman said. There were no damage or casualties in that attack.

Levesque to dine with queen

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday he will attend a dinner in honor of Queen Elizabeth with the nine other provincial premiers at Prime Minister Trudeau's summer house in Harrington Lake, Que., Oct. 16.

Levesque told his weekly news conference it would be inconceivable for Quebec not to be represented, adding that the dinner with "the Queen of Great Britain" is part of Quebec's "royalty month."

Somali rebels blow up vital Ethiopian bridge

NAIROBI (UPI) — Somali rebels have blown up a vital bridge linking war-torn Ethiopia to the Red Sea, severing Addis Ababa's last overland route for fuel shipments, Somalia Radio said Wednesday.

It said guerrillas of the Afars Liberation Front blew up a bridge on the road from Addis Ababa to Assab, the last port which had been open to Ethiopian convoys from the capital.

The report also marked the first time the Somalis had broadcast a communique for the Afars front.

The Afars are one of two major tribes in the newly-independent state of Djibouti, sandwiched on the coast between Ethiopia and Somalia, and claim that the Ethiopians hold territory which historically belonged to the tribe.

Ottawa studying travel spending curb, says paper

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says the federal government is studying a plan which would restrict to $600 a year the amount Canadian tourists could spend outside the country.

The newspaper says in today's editions it has learned that such currency controls — which, if adopted, would be the first of their kind in peacetime — would apply mainly to holiday travel because business trips abroad would be exempted.

The plan also mentions the possibility of limits on the money Canadians could send to relatives abroad, the newspaper says, noting that provisions would be made for exemptions on compassionate grounds.

The paper noted the plan was not government policy but was said to be under study by senior federal civil servants, principally those in the commerce and transport departments. The $600 figure was described by one official as "a discussion point only."

More money is being spent by Canadians abroad than is flowing into the country and the tourism deficit is seen as particularly burdensome for the economy.

The number of Canadian visits abroad in the first half of this year increased to 18.2 million, up by 8.5 per cent. The newspaper says these tourists spent $1.951 billion, about 19 per cent more than for the corresponding period last year.

Meanwhile, the number of people visiting Canada was down about three per cent in the first six months of the year compared with the first half of 1976.

The newspaper says the government is also considering ways to cut the costs of travelling within the country as an inducement to spending vacations at home to help the balance of payments.

Some new touches for Day No. 3

Lady in Black filibusters on

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

In the morning there had been a little jogging and weightlifting.

And what lay ahead was Day No. 3 in the word marathon of Rosemary Brown.

As she entered the Legislature at 2 p.m. to continue her monumental battle on behalf of the Vancouver Resources Board, Mrs. Brown (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) had added to her mounds of ammunition and trappings.

There was the usual box full of documents and the black clothing to mourn what she says is the death of the resources board. But now she was wearing a T-shirt she said she found on her desk — a black shirt with a printed message: "Kill Bill 65."

If looks could be transformed into a message, the same sentiment appeared later to be aimed at another bill — Bill Vander Zalm, the human resources minister who incurred the wrath of the Opposition with his proposed legislation to bring the resources board functions under his control.

For Rosemary Brown, the opposition human resources critic, the cause is worthy of a full-fledged filibuster — and she began her task toward the end of Monday's sitting.

By the time the Legislature called it a day at 11 p.m. Wednesday, she had put in eight hours and 45 minutes on her feet — counting the deductions for rests she had obtained when her party-mates spelled her off with various concocted point-of-order questions.

With a bouquet from one admirer, a single rose from another, a supply of throat spray and a seemingly unending list of support messages, she pressed on with the job of trying to prove that Vander Zalm is out to dehumanize the former government's model for decentralizing social aid.

She read telegrams from church groups "blessing" her, and talked a great deal about the poor of Vancouver, the native Indian population and others she said had been

She read poems and even found ways to mention U.S. President Jimmy Carter and federal cabinet minister Otto Lang without really straying from the subject.

Although she looked weary on occasion and sat with her head back when colleagues spelled her off with stalling tactics, Mrs. Brown said she was determined to go on.

"We're dealing with a very stubborn minister, but I'm not going to give up," she told the house.

There were various exchanges between the government and the Opposition, although the filibuster had left a shortage of troops. On one occasion, only 13 of the 55 members were in the house — only three over the number required for a quorum.

On another, only seven MLAs were present, but Smith rang the division bells to bring the required number in.

While some of those in the house appeared to be getting giddy by early in the evening session — there were sporadic bursts of laughter, even giggles — the tone wasn't always humorous.

During the afternoon, Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) accused Mrs. Brown of being on an "ego trip."

"You believe anybody with guts is on an ego trip," retorted the weary but alert Mrs. Brown. "After years of being married to a doctor, you should know a little more about the anatomy than that."

Some of the attempts of the Opposition to stall for resting time were hilarious or — as Speaker Ed Smith preferred to put it — ingenious and novel.

The bill was described as imperfect and incomplete, and discussion of formality even made reference to the "king" and the need for members to be uncovered (without hats).

At one point, Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) held up a hastily printed message so that Vander Zalm could see it from across the house. It said: "Resign."

Lauk said later that Vander Zalm had replied: "I'm your only chance for re-election — why should I resign?"

Councillors want residents-only candidates rule

VERNON (CP) — Delegates at the Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention Wednesday approved a policy statement calling for local residency as the sole qualification for holding locally-elected office.

By a 198 to 173 margin, delegates voted that property-owners non-resident in a community be denied the right to run for office.

Vancouver Ald. Harry Rankin said he was pleased the UBCM had chosen to remove ownership of property "as the sole basis for running for office."

Rankin said the policy, which will be forwarded for consideration by the provincial government, prevents a person who lives in Burnaby and owns a business in Vancouver from running in Vancouver where his interests might be in conflict with those on local residents.

However the convention decided that property ownership was sufficient qualification to permit a person to vote in a community.

Delegates rejected an amendment to another policy statement that would have denied a vote to those owning property but not living in a community, then defeated a motion allowing voters to vote in only one municipality.

Jim Campbell of Saturna Island said the votes of non-residents usually work against improved services nor locals.

"Summer visitors and those who own summer camps come to vote against any move to increase taxes," he said.

Marilyn Baker of North Vancouver district moved an amendment that would have made it UBCM policy to support the restriction of each voter to one voters' list.

Said Ian Case of Saanich, supporting the motion: "It's a simple matter of whether we believe in one man, one vote."

However, the delegates, by a margin of 177-148, supported the rights of a property owner to vote in the community where he owns property, whether or not he is a full-time resident.

UBCM chooses Cariboo mayor

VERNON (CP) — Jim Fraser, mayor of Williams Lake and a member of the union of B.C. municipalities' executive for the past six years, was acclaimed Wednesday as UBCM president for 1977-78. He will succeed Mayor Pat Duke of Lumby.

All thumbs for Pepin in Halifax

HALIFAX (CP) — The drivers in the three-piece suits had no time to stop but an old gent from Springhill, N.S., salvaged a visit here Wednesday by one of Canada's leading figures in the national unity debate.

Jean-Luc Pepin, co-chairman of the Task Force on National Unity, was en route here from the airport when his car broke down, leaving him standing beside the road with his thumb out, Jean Garneau, one of Pepin's aides, said in an interview later.

"The business people with suits and ties kept speeding by but one citizen with some time to spare stopped to lend a hand," Garneau said.

"I told him every time I hear Anne Murray I'll think of him."

Miss Murray, a popular singer, is also from Springhill. Garneau said the incident helped Pepin, who opens two days of public hearings on national unity here today, give his trip "a grass roots start."

Hundreds of workers docked by B.C. Tel

VANCOUVER (CP) — An estimated 400 British Columbia Telephone Co. workers were docked a day's pay for participating in a 90-minute truck demonstration Wednesday that snarled traffic and frayed tempers in the heart of the downtown area.

In the first overt action against the company since contract negotiations broke off a week ago, more than 300 B.C. Tel trucks were driven through the city centre, bringing a deluge of complaint calls.

"This is not a job action, like the work-to-rule tactics or a strike," said a company spokesman. "This is illegal action and it inconveniences the public—and only yesterday the unionists were saying that was something they wouldn't do."

The horn-blowing demonstrators, among 9,500 members of the Telecommunication Workers Union of B.C. displayed placards calling on management to "Sign it, not sit on it," and saying, "You've got yours, give us ours."

The first slogan referred to the Noel Hall conciliation report, which called for basic wage increases of 45 cents an hour and which the union has agreed to and the company has not. The second refers to the rate increases granted this year to B.C. Tel.

The dispute involves the company's refusal to drop the principle of contracting-out work considered uneconomic within the company.

Originally, B.C. T officials ordered Wednesdays demonstrators to be suspended indefinitely, but later decided that participating workers would lose only the day's pay.

Union leaders advised the workers involved to bring in their trucks if ordered to do so, but to remain available for work for the remainder of their shifts.

"We have promised not to inconvenience a large number of subscribers through a strike," said a union spokesman.

"A relatively brief traffic tie-up doesn't seem to us to be a major public inconvenience. Besides, it let a lot of our people work off steam."

Union leaders gave no hint of what the next move, aimed at encouraging the company to agree to the Hall recommendations, would be, or where it would occur.

On Tuesday, union spokesmen said they planned "various skirmishes and harassment tactics" instead of a strike, but on Wednesday some union sources said a full-scale walkout remained a potential weapon.

The union has been in a position to strike legally since last May 30, and because it comes under the federal labor code, it is not obliged to give 72-hour strike notice.

Meanwhile, 11 telephone installers booked off the job at B.C. Tel's Port Moody office east of Vancouver Wednesday morning, and supervisory personnel were called in to take over the work.

Frisco rocked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A powerful explosion followed by fire destroyed a two-storey building at Fishermans' Wharf Wednesday, sending bodies flying through a harbor tours office and blowing out walls 25 feet away.

First reports indicated about a half-dozen persons were injured, some critically.

Dennis Fullalove, 23, a cashier in the harbor tours office, said the explosion occurred as Pacific Gas and Electric Co. workers were repairing a gas main in the building.

"Suddenly I heard this roar and it just felt like a giant picked me up and dropped me on my rump," he said.

Fullalove escaped with an arm injury but said "other people were blasted away, flying through the air." The walls were blasted at least 25 feet.

Hundreds of tourists and workers watched as flames enveloped the pier during the noon lunch hour. The smoke spread out many blocks away.

Small blast put Quebec in the dark

MONTREAL (UPI) — Hydro Quebec probed the pieces of a white porcelain transformer Wednesday for the cause of a small blast that unravelled a sophisticated province-wide power network, triggering one of the lengthiest blackouts in recent Quebec history.

"We don't know why it blew up," Hydro spokesman Andre Saindin said of the explosion that knocked out power in most of Quebec and a corner of New Brunswick for periods of up to seven hours Tuesday.

"It could be any one of many, many reasons," he said. "We may have some preliminary idea by the end of the week."

But he denied trying to hide his past from the Senate committee which recommended his confirmation as budget director in January and he said he never used political clout to get the federal government to close investigations of his activities.

Carter said Lance, who was at his Georgetown home during the news conference, did a "superb" job of defending himself in three days of testimony before the Senate governmental affairs committee last week and "he was able to clear his name when he testified."

Carter said he did not request the resignation but he and Lance communicated on the subject "without embarrassment."

The president acknowledged "there have been numerous allegations which I admit are true but a lot of the problem has been brought on Bert Lance by me, because of the extraordinary standards we have tried to set in government and the expectations of the American people that were engendered in my own campaign and my inauguration statement."

On Capitol Hill, Republican Senator Charles Percy, Lance's most persistent critic during the Senate hearings, said Carter and Lance "have made the correct decision."

"My heart goes out to the president and to the Lance family at this time," he added.

Western winners

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five ticket numbers, each worth $100,000, were drawn Wednesday in the Western Express lottery draw.

The winning numbers are 55014 in Series 07, 56175 in Series 10, 56831 in Series 18, 91856 in Series 20 and 86302 in Series 02.

Police wound Soweto blacks at funeral

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Riot police Wednesday shot and killed a 15-year-old black and wounded several others outside two churches in the Soweto ghetto following memorial services for student leader Steven Biko, witnesses said.

The witnesses, other students attending the Soweto memorial services, said the police also carried sjamboks —leather whips—fired rubber bullets and swung clubs at the crowds of youths who gathered to mourn the 30-year-old black power leader who died in prison last week, reportedly after a one-week hunger strike.

Brig. Jan Visser, police chief in the black ghetto outside Johannesburg, said the students brought on police retaliation by hurling stones outside the churches.

Visser said he could not confirm the witnesses' casualty reports, but he reported his men fired six pistol shots, four rifle bullets and one round from a shotgun. Officials at Barragwanath hospital in Soweto refused to answer reporters' questions.

The services for Biko were held at the Regina Mundi Roman Catholic church and at St. Matthew's church in a separate area of the sprawling blacks-only township, which has a population of more than one million.

David Modise, 17, a student who attended the memorial at Regina Mundi, said he saw white policemen at the church carrying sjamboks.

Ephraim Madelane, 17, told a reporter from the black newspaper The World that black policemen beat him with their fists and with clubs before he could enter the church.

Other students said police asked them why they were not at school, who their leaders were and "who sells dagga?" (marijuana).

The shooting incident was the first report of violence in Soweto in several weeks.

Visser, speaking to white Afrikaaner businessmen Tuesday, blamed recurrent violence in the ghetto on the fact that life in Soweto, 15 miles from Johannesburg, is "a bore."

"Soweto is so boring it sometimes drives you up the wall. The houses are all the same; there are not enough facilities for the people; there is hardly any electricity supply; roads are bad and there are no telephones," the police chief said.

U.S. plan requires changes

WASHINGTON (UPI) The U.S. has proposed a possible solution to the problem of Palestinian representation at the Geneva conference that would involve concessions from both sides in the Middle East, diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The sources said U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance had proposed that the Palestinians be represented by a delegation of Arab mayors from West Bank cities.

This would conform to the Israeli insistence that the Palestinians could not be represented by members of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which is regarded by Israel as only a terrorist group.

In turn, according to the informants, under the American proposal the Israelis would accept that all of the Arabs, including the Palestinians, come in one large pan-Arab delegation.

'Policewoman invited touch'

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Milwaukee county Judge Ralph Gorenstein has dismissed a sexual assault case involving a policewoman posing as a prostitute, saying the policewoman, by posing as "a lady of the evening," implied consent.

Gorenstein dismissed a charge against Phillip Minor, 23, who was accused of grabbing the undercover policewoman's breast and kissing her at the same time.

Minor was charged Saturday after the incident involving undercover policewoman Christine Leonard.

Gorenstein said that a police officer posing as a prostitute was inviting such familiarity.

"If you go out and you pose as a prostitute, as far as I am concerned you are consenting to this type of activity," he said.

"There was no harm done here besides touching," he said. "I severely disapprove of sexual abuse and rape but I don't think policewomen posing as prostitutes ... can claim they didn't give consent to the touching of their breasts."

District attorney E. Michael McCann said Wednesday the dismissal was "absolutely outrageous" and that he will appeal the case.

McCann said he did not think an undercover officer "stands there free to be grabbed by anyone — not even a real prostitute." He said even prostitutes have "a right to be protected."

The case is reminiscent of one handled by Dane county Judge Archie Simonson in Madison, Wis., who was removed from the bench in a recall election after he said sexual permissiveness led to three high school students' attack on a girl.

Grim outlook on world's oil

ISTANBUL (UPI) — The world's oil fields are running dry and prices are likely to "rocket uncontrollably" after 1985 if alternative sources of energy are not developed, a report to the 10th World Energy Conference said Wednesday.

Even full utilization of all known petroleum resources in the world would result in 100 per cent price increases for all oil products, such as gasoline and heating oil, the conference's conservation committee said.

"Crude oil reserves are running out," the report said. "The years 1985 to 1995 seem critical.

"If the demand for petroleum continues at that time, that is, if there is not sufficient availability of coal and nuclear electricity, there will probably be a shortage and oil prices are likely to rocket uncontrollably."

The five-day conference, which began Monday, is attended by more than 4,000 government officials, energy industry executives, economists, scientists and engineers from 70 countries.

The conservation committee said its report was based on a poll of 29 public authorities, oil companies and energy industry experts — the first survey of its kind to be carried out.

"The most disturbing point is the conclusion that the annual rate of growth of reserves is slowing down. Between 1970 and 1975 only 8.5 billion barrels of oil were discovered per year whereas world consumption was 19.4 billion barrels," the report said.

Posing the question, "Will there be enough oil to satisfy world demand in the next 30 or 40 years?" the report said: "Yes, if we include oil from all sources; no, if we mean conventional petroleum (crude oil) we use today."

The report urged governments to help finance development of non-conventional oil sources, such as oil shales, tar sands and oil from deep offshore and polar zones. But it warned producing oil from these sources could cost from $20 to $25 a barrel, at 1976 dollar values — roughly double the current world market price.

Bubble boy is six

David's body has no germ-fighting abilities so he lives in a sterile bubble unit. He has never been touched by ungloved hands.

Despite his handicap, David reads extremely well, has a fantastic vocabulary and is curious and inquisitive about the world around him.

After the spacesuit is tested at the hospital, doctors say David may be able to spend up to four hours at a time in the rubberized garment, which has a soft, transparent plastic helmet.

His parents have asked that their last name and address not be made public.

David's inherited disorder killed an older brother at seven months.

Doctors say the disease afflicts an estimated one in every 10,000 male infants. Female infants are not affected.

Some marks to shoot at

NDP HUMAN RESOURCES critic Rosemary Brown (Vancouver-Burrard) is off and running on her well-publicized filibuster against government legislation designed to wipe out the Vancouver Resources Board.

Chalking up nearly four hours on the first leg of her verbal marathon, Mrs. Brown has let it be known that she has sufficient material to keep her going for 100 hours.

Disappointingly, however, the doughty MLA says she has no intention of going that long.

If she speaks for more than 12½ hours she will break the most recent record set by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips when he spoke against the Land Commission Act during his days in Opposition. If she wishes to seek an all-time record for the B.C. house she must go beyond 16 hours to beat Leonard McClure who spoke that long in 1866 to defeat a tax bill.

But this is all small stuff — not even worthy of a passing reference in the Guinness Book of Records. To gain that sort of fame she must out-talk U.S. Senator Wayne Morse, who chalked up 22 hours, 26 minutes without resuming his seat in 1953, or U.S. Senator Strom Thurmond who set a record of 24 hours, 19 minutes for a filibuster (although he had breaks between) in 1957. The all-time record is still held by Texas Senator Mick McKool who filibustered in the state Senate for 42 hours and three minutes in 1972.

The longest parliamentary speech — presumably at one standing — lasted a mere six hours, but the record for non-stop talking is 144 hours and four minutes and is held by Tim Harty of Coon Rapids, Minnesota. Gerard O'Donnell of Kingston-upon-Hull, Humberside, holds the record for the longest political speech which lasted 29 hours and five minutes.

It thus appears the field is wide open for Mrs. Brown if she changed her mind and used all her material to shoot at the 100-plus hours mark. She still has a chance, anyway, to get into the Guinness record book, courtesy of the Guild of Professional Toastmasters which is continually searching for "the most boring speaker of the year."

Unfortunately the guild will not announce the winner's name until AD 2000.

The behinder we get

AND SPEAKING of the book of records, whether the Guinness people are being too sticky with the request for recognition by Victoria's boy-wonder marathon gum-chewer, they can hardly pass up another recent accomplishment, the 1.4 miles flight of that pedal-driven plane, the first sustained man-powered flight ever.

It was really something, but modern man is likely to be less record-struck than just plain uninterested in the feat. After all, a body would have to be in pretty good shape to fly such a contraption and, since the end of the pioneer days, the human species has degenerated to flab.

Byran Allan, the successful flyer of fellow-Californian Paul McCready's brain-child, was given the job of "pilot", it is well to note, because of his abilities as a bicycle racer. It would exhaust today's average man to pedal 1.4 miles on a macadamized surface, let alone the same distance in the air.

Still, we shouldn't eschew too completely the idea of pedal-flying. We constantly are told that this is an age of crisis and that man teeters between the possibilities of cave-man and super-man.

Given the worse — if, indeed, to re-enter the cave is the worse — it might not be so bad to have one of McCready's things on hand. It would require no energy units other than those pumped out by the operator, of course. But more interestingly, it would be the compleat irony to have something behind the times in its own age ahead of the times in the new one.

Small-business stimulation advocated

OTTAWA — When British Columbia's Len Marchand one year ago became Canada's first cabinet minister responsible for small business, (a post now being taken over by Tony Abbott with Mr. Marchand becoming Minister of the Environment) the government seemed to be promising great things.

But as is customary with political promises, the "goodies" didn't materialize.

Now, as Parliament prepares for a new session, the cries for action are becoming louder and more frequent.

Even in the midst of their summer holidays, Opposition members have been pressing the goverment to take immediate steps to adopt measures to stimulate small business.

Toronto Conservative MP Otto Jelinek has emerged as a leader in the move towards reversing the decline of the small business sector.

He has called on the government to develop a small business act to encompass all federal government matters dealing with small business and provide a much-needed incentive in the form of specific programs.

Jelinek also wants the government to define exactly what constitutes small business and to establish a small business secretariat to help it cope with government and compete with big business, as well as represent its general interests.

Hot off the press this month to offer a boost to Jelinek's argument is a book call "Small Business: Building a Better Economy."

Published by Press Porcepic Ltd., of Erin, Ontario, an owner-managed small business, the 192-page book was written by Dr. Rein Peterson of Toronto's York University. While on sabbatical leave from the university, Peterson travelled around the world and throughout Canada to discover the facts about small business.

The author sets out one major conclusion and recommendation. "We need in Canada to increase our awareness and understanding of the various roles to be played by both large institutions and individuals in a more dispersed and balanced economy and to stress innovation, entrepreneurship and self-reliance as social goals."

With creeping socialism threatening to engulf the nation and destroy it, Peterson's suggestion seems to make good sense if only government would listen and act in time.

The book proposes separate industrial policies be developed for the big, foreign-owned and small business sectors in Canada.

Like Jelinek, Dr. Peterson wants a clean conceptual definition of small business. He suggests it should be defined as one which is independently owned and managed with no more than 500 employees.

He also recommends, as Jelinek did, that a small business act be passed by Parliament. The act should include a definition of small business, as well as "clearly stated and measurable socio-economic goals" for it, together with advice on achieving those goals.

The book concludes small business needs more than just a political voice in cabinet. It insists the ministry of state for small business needs permanent, departmental-level, civil service support.

It suggests the department of regional economic expansion (DREE) could be reorganized to include small business.

The new publication is likely to have an impact on political thinking this fall. If it prompts sensible action, it will have served a most worthwhile purpose since, according to Jelinek, the ailing small business sector is responsible for about 60 per cent of the Canadian labor force.

Ottawa-Carleton Tory MP Jean Piggott — who was elected to the Commons only a year ago to fill the seat vacated by John Turner — has become a strong supporter of Jelinek's crusade. As operator of a family-established bakery in the capital, she believes the entire set of problems facing small business is a result of government actions and inaction.

"The first needed change is a change of attitude within the tax department," Pigott contends. "The second is an overall long range policy for small business."

The small business study for Peterson's book was subsidized by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business which represents nearly 90,000 owner-managed firms. York University covered 55 per cent of the expenses while some of the costs associated with data gathering were absorbed by the federal department of industry, trade and commerce, and Statistics Canada.

The book observed — to the surprise of many — that Japan owes much of its industrial success to an aggressive program designed to support small business.

Although most Canadians think Japan is dominated by enormous conglomerates, it actually claims one of the world's most successful small business sectors. Peterson learned no less than 68 per cent of Japan's work force is employed by smaller firms which support big multinational industries through sub-contracting.

The author calls on governments to demonstrate "through reprivatization of many of their own services" that sub-contracting makes good economic and organizational sense.

Peterson's studies also concluded the House of Commons and Senate should set up a permanent joint committee on small business. The university professor suggested an annual airing of the concerns of the Canadian small business sector — along the lines of hearings carried out in the United States — would be useful as a means of informing and educating the politicians, the civil servants and the general public.

That educational process, he believes, is vitally important if small business expansion is to be encouraged.

Over the next few months, the Canadian government is going to find itself under increasing pressure to act.

"I never appreciated the real value of education 'till the kids returned to school."

But the work gets done

MONTREAL — While realizing that as an anglophone I must not become hysterical, I will say that when Bill 101 is fitted about us as tightly as a straitjacket, my house is going to develop some very dirty floors.

At least, that is what I believe if I read the bill properly. The working language of Montreal, as I understand this, is to become French. If not, government spies will sneak up on one and wreak retribution.

Which, as I said, will mean dirty floors in a certain residence in Montreal West.

You see, in this residence we have a cleaning lady who comes once a week to slide a cleaning rag over our magnificent floors. She operates in Italian.

The foreperson in this hive of activity is my mother-in-law. She is there to make sure the cleaning rag is used.

She operates in Toronto English.

During the past few years while this working partnership has been operating I have found that these two women, the cleaning lady and my mother-in-law, have hammered out their own language of work.

This morning, for instance, as I was leaving for the office I heard my mother-in-law ask the cleaning lady, "Did you latch the steps when you came in?"

As the slow drive to the office went on I had time to mull over this quote. How does one "latch the steps?" Finally I gave up and turned to my constant source of wisdom, my wife, and asked her what she thought of it.

My wife calmly explained that the cleaning lady did not grasp the word door. But the word "steps" — when those steps led up to our front door — she did get. So, to protect herself and my mother-in-law from any friendly neighborhood rapists, she had put the "latch on the steps", when she came in.

It is, of course, a world-wide joke that we who speak English nurse the illusion that if we are talking with non-English-speaking people they will eventually understand if only we will speak loudly and distinctly.

Our Italian cleaning lady relies on the same basic principle. One morning I was sleeping in when I was jolted out of my slumber by her booming at me, "Morning Franco". After I collected my senses I realized she was addressing me — my name, in the family language of work, has become Franco — and she was merely giving me a cheery greeting before starting to disturb the dust in my room.

But what fascinates me about this foreperson-and-employee relationship in my house is how well it works.

My mother-in-law will hold up a scrubbing brush, point at the floor and loudly and distinctly say, "Scrub". The cleaning lady will give her a warm, southern Italy smile, and start cleaning the nearest window.

Then, after about 10 minutes, she will look at my mother-in-law, smile again and say, "Scrub". She will then point at the floor, my mother-in-law will nod, and she begins to scrub.

It might not be an efficiency expert's dream of how work should be accomplished, but the job gets done.

The two women over the years have also developed their own mode of social chatter. The cleaning lady will chatter on, using lots of gestures, in Italian and my mother-in-law will reply:

"It sounds as though it will be a lovely party. I hope your daughter enjoys it."

And the cleaning lady will nod enthusiastically.

Somehow these two, while not knowing what the other is saying, have built up some kind of rapport about everything from scrubbing to partying. Much to my bewilderment, they communicate. And that is why I am worried about Bill 101.

If these two have to abandon their strangely structured language of work, the floors in my home are apt to get awfully dirty.

Also, those steps will no longer be latched and rape may become rampant in Montreal West.

Bring back Bond

From The Toronto Star

International espionage is getting a bit too international. A news story has reported the government of South Korea tried to recruit an American to spy on Cubans in Canada. Don't ask us why.

Oh for the good old James Bond days when the Russians spied on the Americans and the Americans spied on the Russians and everything was simple and straightforward in the world of microdots and poisoned darts.

A financial realist's assessment of Canada

TORONTO — Harry Schultz, if not the best, is certainly a leading contender as the world's most flamboyant and colorful (gold colored) financial wizard.

If he weren't so successful and dazzling, one might be tempted to call him an international political dilettante. The trouble is "dilettante" implies superficial and trivial, knowledgeable but frivolous. Schultz, though he has flair, ego, a sense of humor and is his own most diligent press agent, is not a person to be taken lightly or casually dismissed.

Even when he is wrong in his economic predictions (and he at least has the courage to have an opinion), there is usually a reason.

Schultz is the world's most up-front gold bug — he sees salvation, hope (and occasionally despair) in gold. He often runs against the tide of orthodox, conventional economics and financial wisdom. Especially with gold. He publishes a variety of newsletters that reflect his version of truth and reality. His views and predictions encompass the world. What makes him different is the streak of common sense that prevails in his analyses. Schultz thinks the West is in decline. He is under no illusions about what will happen in Africa once Rhodesia and South Africa are done in. He is aware of the realities of "detente." He's not afraid of holding — and disseminating — unfashionable opinions and contemplating the unthinkable.

Harry Schultz spent much of the summer in Toronto (he considers it one of the world's attractive cities, which gives an indication of his wisdom or lack of it!). In the mid-August edition of the International Harry Schultz Letter (it sells for $14 a copy, which shows chutzpah) he has an assessment of Canada which is more perceptive than anything that has recently emerged from Canadian sources.

It is useful to see how a financial realist with world experience views one's country. Read this and compare Schult's prejudices with your own experiences. He writes:

I ran an ad ("dream job travelling—second secretary") in Canada. The response was overwhelming. Like 300. But the point is, about 98 per cent of them (and almost all other Canadians that I have talked to) are very lukewarm about politics. They don't think there is any loss, or threat of loss, of freedom from their left-bending government, or that socialism is a threat to the Western World (let alone communism). In any case they aren't much interested and certainly don't plan to do anything about it.

I have rarely seen so complacent a citizenry. Canadians are long-famous for being wishy-washy. They don't invest in their own companies, so foreign capital fills the gap.

They only save money. This makes for a calm, peaceful, non-violent society, but also a high-risk society, as they don't recognize or care that their freedom is slowly being lost.

They're bystanders. It's fun to talk to hundreds of young girls, but terrifying to see such complacency on a mass scale, with hardly an exception. For there is no fear or concern, and little hope of improvement. I asked each girl whether she would rather be labelled socialist or conservative. All hesitated a long time; they really weren't sure, whether 18 or 38. Oh, Canada! . . .

At a dinner party someone told me Canada was like vichyssoise. That is, French, cold and hard to stir. That's funny, but not quite true. It's only partly French, only cold in winter, but I agree they are hard to stir to action, even to save themselves . . .

Migration into Canada has been falling in recent years. 1976 was 20 per cent down from 1975. So far 1977 is 15 per cent behind 1976. Most immigrants come from the U.K., U.S. and Hong Kong in that order . . .

Canada played host (recently) to Tanzanian dictator Nyerere. The press called him a "moderate." Harry Schultz' letter calls him a fanatic/racist/terrorist/supporter who will take Communist arms. He's here to persuade Canada (and then the U.S.) to show stronger support for the murder-liberation movements, who represent only themselves, not most of the people in the countries they seek to "liberate." It is sour grapes or stewed prunes, as all the black foaming-at-the-mouth-nations don't let their own citizens vote either, or when they do they have only one party to choose from.

But in Canada's present frame of mind, it wouldn't surprise me to see Trudeau promise help to slaughter African whites even though those whites have been in South Africa longer than white Canadians have been in Canada, or white Americans in America.

A local newspaper published a column from a Soviet news agency based in Ottawa, urging military detente on Canada. A year ago I witnessed Soviet navy craft in Vancouver (and went aboard). This year I see the wooing stepped up. The brainwash purpose is to anesthetize Canadians into seeing the U.S.S.R. as no threat. And the moon is made of yogurt . . .

Anyway that's the Schultz view of Canada. Judging only by this assessment, I for one would be inclined to accept his financial advice and invest in gold (if I had extra money). He seems to know what he is talking about . . .

CAPTAIN BOB CHICKEN is one of those who receives an indexed pension but who doesn't believe in indexed pensions — at least not the way indexing is carried on now. He has what would probably be a much better plan, one that would certainly save the government money on the present ill-advised scheme. He takes the figures of $10,000 and $20,000 just for ease of calculating. If a person receives a $10,000 pension, then it would be fully indexed to the cost of living. A person receiving $20,000 pension would receive no indexing and anything in between would be on a sliding scale. Certainly makes a lot more sense than the way it stands now where a civil servant receiving a $30,000 per year pension, gets the same full-indexing as a person getting $7,000 per year. All the present plan does is widen the gap at a great cost to the public purse . . .

If it proves to be what supporters claim, then fine, legalize it and bring the price within range of everyone's pocketbook. As it stands now, the cost is almost prohibitive and means somebody is making one helluva lot of money out of it.

Conversely, if the stuff proves to be of no real benefit in the battle against killer cancer, then I would expect the laetrile promoters, once and for all, to silently steal away and stop the charade . . .

Thompson inquiry: Is it just a farce?

Who will decide if Canada needs a coast oil port — the people of B.C. or the federal government?

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist Reporter

There is an uneasy feeling in B.C. about the relevance of the Thompson inquiry, and for good reason.

Since the inquiry was announced in March by federal Justice Minister Ron Basford, British Columbians have been under the impression that it was their inquiry, and that the inquiry mattered.

The people in this province assumed that they would help to decide if B.C. would be a suitable location for an oil port. And if it were suitable, under what precautions.

Apparently, this is not so. An Aug. 11 letter from Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Alastair Gillespie to another cabinet minister says the federal government is carrying out its own "comprehensive study" of the situation.

The text of the letter was given to the Colonist last Friday. The fact that the energy, mines and resources ministry was "carrying out a comprehensive study of what new port facilities might be required in the future on both the West and East Coasts," as Gillespie put it in his letter, was news to the Thompson inquiry.

Thompson
. . . not aware of study

Andrew Thompson, the Vancouver lawyer and former B.C. Energy Commission chairman who was appointed by the federal government to head the inquiry, said this week that he wasn't aware of the ministry's study.

Former B.C. Liberal MP and MLA David Anderson thinks the inquiry may be "superceded by events" in both Canada and the U.S. He sees the two countries making independent decisions on the planning of oil ports, leaving the Thompson inquiry in the lurch.

If Anderson is correct, if the Thompson inquiry is an "irrelevant process," then Canadian taxpayers must be wondering if the inquiry isn't a strange place in which to spend more than $1 million of their money.

The Thompson inquiry's budget of $1.5 million goes toward determining, among other things, if Canada needs a West Coast oil port. Gillespie and his staff of civil servants apparently have already decided that it does.

Gillespie's letter says the Thompson inquiry "will be helpful in planning for the future." If one has any doubt about that future, then one must again consider the terms of Gillespie's study: "a comprehensive study of what new port facilities might be required in the future on both the East and West Coasts."

The $1.5 million inquiry budget was provided for by the federal government, that is, by Canadian taxpayers. The money comes out of regular government budgets that pay for enforcement of the 200-mile fishing limit, enforcement of poaching regulations and salmon enhancement programs.

The Thompson inquiry is expected to ask for more money in December. One doesn't expect the federal government to say publicly that the Thompson inquiry is an irrelevant process, particularly with more than $1 million invested. But the question of the inquiry's relevance, now that Gillespie's letter has been made public, is begging to be answered.

One could argue that the inquiry has a social and a psychological relevance — that it is good for British Columbians to feel involved in the decision-making process. But for $1.5 million? And for what purpose?

Thompson, in the manner of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, has been holding public hearings around the province. He listens to submissions from corporations and from isolated communities, from urban environmentalists and north coastal fishermen.

There are about 75,000 people represented before the inquiry by the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the Kitimat Oil Coalition alone, including legal and environmental experts.

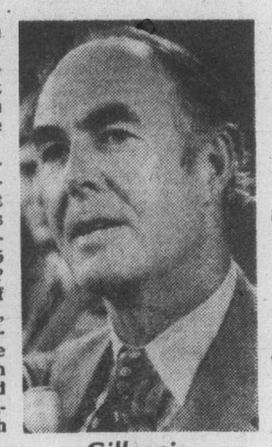
Thompson has 24 full-time staff members, including an artist. He said this week that he assumes Gillespie's "comprehensive study" is a departmental review that will parallel his inquiry. Gillespie will no doubt have to say so now.

The Thompson inquiry was known as the Kitimat oil inquiry until June, when Kitimat Pipe Line Ltd., suddenly "set aside" its application to build an oil port and 753-mile pipeline from Kitimat to the U.S. midwest.

If the company revives its application, Kitimat could still become a West Coast oil terminal for the U.S. The withdrawal of the application may be part of a corporate end-game in which the inquiry is a pawn.

Withdrawing the application put a lid on the growing movement against the Kitimat site. If the application resurfaces, the chances are good, and are certainly better, that it will be approved by the National Energy Board.

Such a corporate game would be comparable to the political games that are now being played in Ottawa at the expense of the participants in the inquiry.



Gillespie
. . . helpful in future

The victims of this games-playing are a few hundred thousand persons in B.C. who don't want to see their fisheries, beaches, scenery and tourist industry ruined by oil leakages and spills. The issue is an emotional one for environmentalists, fisheries, unionists and legislators alike.

I attended an oil pollution conference in Bellingham, Wash., last March when the Washington state ecology director, Wilbur Hallauer, stood up and said that there is an "environmental constituency" in B.C., comprised of "socialists and communists" that thinks "oil in inland waters is dangerous."

The issue is not socialists or communists, but whether the people of this province will have some control over their own lives and occupations.

A time of legislative change is invariably followed by a strengthening of bureaucracy.

Several years ago, a far-sighted city council decided to rid Victoria of billboards, roof signs and third-party advertising signs.

It was one of the most progressive steps by any municipality in North America to put a stop to the visual pollution that comes with the proliferation of outdoor advertising.

It was to be expected that enforcement of the new sign bylaw would produce some bureaucratic excesses.

In some aspects, city hall bureaucracy has surpassed all expectations. It therefore comes as no surprise that city merchants are fighting back.

A number of cases illustrate the confrontation between city hall and merchants who feel they are dependent for business on advertising that doesn't comply with regulations.

Because of the severe restrictions of the sign bylaw, some merchants have resorted to erecting sandwich boards outside their premises.

That puts them in a position of violating the city's streets and traffic bylaw. Nothing must be placed on city sidewalks.

I don't think sandwich boards look particularly attractive, but I know of at least one case where the merchant might really depend for business on sandwich board advertising — at least for the time being.

The owner of a bookstore in the 800-block Fort has just opened recently and he won't be able to get a permanent sign for some time.

He says unless he can advertise his shop by placing a sandwich board on the sidewalk, he might as well close down. I think he might have a point.

Another case involves a young couple who opened a handicraft shop on Camosun Street. To spruce up the place, they also built a little resting place with a bench outside the premises.

Since nothing is allowed on city sidewalks, a "super polite" bureaucrat informed the owners that the stuff has to go. It doesn't matter whether it looks attractive or not.

The clincher came earlier this week when a city hall employee went prowling through town, picking up signs which contravened the bylaws.

Merchants were understandably angry and accused the city of stealing signs.

Although it can hardly be called theft, taking signs right off the street is going a little too far. It goes somewhat beyond enforcement of a bylaw.

There is nothing wrong with the spirit of either the sign bylaw or the streets and traffic bylaw, but there can be a whole lot wrong if they are enforced without discretion.

It seems to me one of the jobs of our elected officials is to follow up on how their legislation is implemented and enforced.

Too much rigidity will cause alienation, something we don't need.

The phasing out of land-use contracts, which are to be replaced by so-called development permits, is bound to spark controversy.

I've yet to meet a municipal politician or planner, for that matter, who likes the idea of eliminating land-use contracts.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is phasing out this zoning tool to speed up the development process, but I wonder whether he couldn't have achieved the same ends with different means.

Land-use contracts have been a successful tool for municipalities to keep developers in line; development permits won't do the same trick.

I wouldn't be surprised if the UBCM passed a resolution urging Curtis to refrain from phasing out land-use contracts. And I also wouldn't be surprised if Curtis eventually complied.

There is no reason why land-use contracts and development permits can't exist side by side. Both have their specific functions.

All's quiet this week on the Greater Victoria municipal front. Most of the aldermen and regional officials are attending the annual conference of the Union of B.C. Municipalities in Vernon.

High on the conference's agenda will be the debate on amendments to the B.C. Municipal Act and their effects on municipalities.

Inner circle re-shuffle

While Prime Minister Trudeau was re-shuffling his inner circle this week (a practice more aptly described as bunny-nosing around in a thicket) the Leader of the Opposition met in Kingston with the Premiers of Alberta, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Ontario.

As Pierre Trudeau demonstrated that the Liberal Party has become truly the party of only one region of Canada (and if Quebec separates the PM and most of the Cabinet will lose their seats in the House of Commons), Joe Clark met with provincial leaders from four major areas in Canada.

Messrs. Lougheed, Moores, Davis and Hatfield have pledged support to Joe Clark and to a united Canada at a time when the Prime Minister is gearing himself for further confrontation with Rene Levesque, could not get along with previous Quebec Premier Bourassa and is certainly not a household work in P.E.I. and Nova Scotia.

Let's give some credit to Canadians who quietly work to promote national unity at a time when it is only too easy to loudly talk about it because that sort of thing attracts more attention.

Return best

One sure way that the Bank of Montreal could attract new customers (Sept. 13) is to increase the interest rate on money deposited within its hallowed walls. I would not deal with a bank that frittered money away on lotteries and gifts to new customers, because those first in the queue for any largesse should be the loyal, long-term customers whose money has helped create that give-away surplus.

The only "change in perception" needed by any bank is to convince perceptive Canadians that they offer the best deal i.e. the greatest return on money deposited.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — Sharply lower energy and transportation issues and an 11-point plunge at New York sent the Toronto stock market down more than six points at the close of moderate trading Wednesday.

Analysts attributed the declines to pessimism on the part of investors about the unlikelihood of any economic improvement in the immediate future.

On the Toronto market, metals and minerals were down 13.55 to 906.27, its lowest since early March of 1975.

Gold issues climbed more than 45 points on the strength of higher international bullion prices. On the London market, bullion has gained more than $3.00 in less than a week to close Wednesday at $151.25 an ounce.

Cheaper loans

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce announced Wednesday its consumer loan rate will be reduced to 12.5 per cent from 13.5 per cent, effective Sept. 26.

The rate for new loans to the bank's key account customers will be reduced to 12.25 per cent from 13.25 per cent, also effective next Monday.

The bank said the rate reduction should provide a "modest and needed stimulus to the economy."

"This full one-per-cent rate reduction will apply to all new personal bank loans except commerce home equity loans."

No wires, coffee-breaks

Mail carrier says 'beep'

By ALEXANDER AUERBACH
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Services

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — It took two years' work and the combined talents of some of their top aerospace scientists, but Lear Siegler Inc. has managed to re-invent the mail clerk.

Except this one doesn't take coffee breaks or flirt while making its appointed rounds. It's called the Mailmobile, and the company describes it as "a self-propelled, automatically guided office delivery vehicle."

Actually, what it does isn't all that terrific. At slightly slower than walking pace, it trundles through an office, stopping so its human co-workers can pick up mail or load it on, then rolls on to the next stop.

The trick is in how it manages to do that.

There are other self-powered delivery carts, but they are guided by signals emitted from wires buried in the floor. That's effective, but hiding the wire is messy if the floor is carpeted and expensive if it's concrete.

Lear Siegler's guidance system engineers, who were looking for non-military products to develop, came up with the idea for a chemical guidepath.

Details are still secret, but Thomas Hainsworth, director of engineering at the firm's Zeeland, Mich., division, says an invisible chemical is applied along a floor path. An ultraviolet light on the Mailmobile causes the chemical to glow, and photosensors pick up the light, activating a steering mechanism.

The guidepath is coded to tell the cart when to stop for 10 to 20 seconds so employees can pick up and drop off mail. The chemical strip can cross itself, figure eight fashion, says Hainsworth, and can be readily removed to change the route.

Two lights flash as the Mailmobile moves, and it emits a soft "beep" as it moves, so it doesn't sneak up on anyone by surprise.

Export total rises

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The value of British Columbia's exports in the first half of the year was up 22.9 percent over the same period in 1976, the Employers' Council of British Columbia said Wednesday.

The increase compared with a national exports increase of 15.2 percent for the same period, the council said in its export report.

Coal exports declined 8.4 percent in value, the first substantial decline in 18 months, while lumber exports increased by 30.1 percent in value, and copper in ores, concentrates, and scrap metal increased by 13.5 percent.

The report said purchases from western Europe rose 15.4 percent, from the United States by 25.5 percent, and from Asia 21.6 percent.

The report noted that since the first quarter of 1976 the growth in value of provincial exports has consistently equalled or surpassed the Canadian growth rate when compared to the same quarter in the previous year.

Telesat appeals ruling

OTTAWA (CP) — Telesat Canada has appealed to the federal cabinet a Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) ruling forbidding a proposed linking of Telesat with an association of regional telephone companies.

David Golden, president of the country's communications satellite company, announced the decision Wednesday in a news release.

The CRTC's decision rejecting the proposal to link Telesat with the Trans Canada Telephone System (TCTS) was announced last month.

That decision, which the federal regulatory agency for communications has called its most important of the decade, followed the federal cabinet's conditional approval of the plan.

The CRTC ruled that the plan was not in the public interest and that it might restrict future competition in the communications industry.

Cabinet approval was given before the CRTC had a chance to deal with the issue on the condition that the cabinet decision did not prejudice the CRTC's decision.

The cabinet action was seen by observers as a major test of the CRTC's independence and powers. Cabinet has the power to rescind the CRTC decision, which may also be appealed to the Federal Court of Canada.

Golden said the long-term interests of Canada would be served by permitting the plan that would lead to the building of an advanced satellite system for the 1980s.

Golden said approval of the Telesat—TCTS association would enable Telesat to provide the new satellite system in the most economic way without involving government financing.

"Not only would Canadians be assured of a commercially viable satellite communications system . . . but the continuing growth of the country's burgeoning space industry would be ensured and irreplaceable orbital positions would be preserved," he said.

The Telesat president said he recognized the regulatory difficulties identified in the CRTC decision are a matter of legitimate public concern, but added they are not insurmountable.

Of Telesat's 6,000,001 shares, the federal government owns 3 million, the telecommunications common carriers (including TCTS members) own 3 million and Golden owns the sole public share. The TCTS members now are one of Telesat's principal customers.

Daily interest

LONDON, Ont. — Starting Oct. 1 Canada Trust will pay daily interest on savings accounts at its computer-linked branches the company said Wednesday. The company says that it is the first of the country's top 10 financial institutions to offer this on other than a local basis.

With a regular savings account, interest is calculated on the minimum balance each month and credited to the account semi-annually. Canada Trust's daily interest savings accounts will pay a slightly lower interest rate (initially by a quarter of one per cent), but interest is to be calculated on the balance at the end of each day and credited to the account monthly.

The company says that unlike some, it has no minimum balance restrictions, deposit or withdrawal charges.

Waterview Townhouses
Luxurious homes on Dallas Rd.
For those who have earned the right to live anywhere they please, Holland Point offers a limited number of luxury townhouses in a one-of-a-kind location. Only eleven of the homes remain for sale. To help you visualize these homes, we cordially invite you to arrange an appointment at your convenience to visit our information centre at the Humboldt St. Wing of the Empress Hotel. Here you can inspect a detailed model of what is to come at Holland Point. Our professional staff will answer your questions and inform you of the materials to be used in construction, the exterior and interior design, the private gardens, the quality appointments and appliances. Then once satisfied of the excellent standards to come, you can let your imagination wander at the location itself. Imagine what living next to sandy beaches and the blue water will be like. Imagine having Holland Point Park right across the street. And imagine your own unobstructed view of the Juan de Fuca Strait, the Olympic Mountains and spectacular sunsets. Holland Point. For ocean-side luxury lovers, these are the homes that epitomize it all.

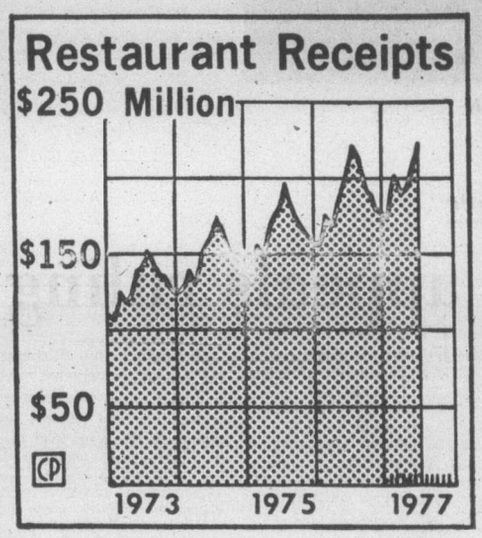
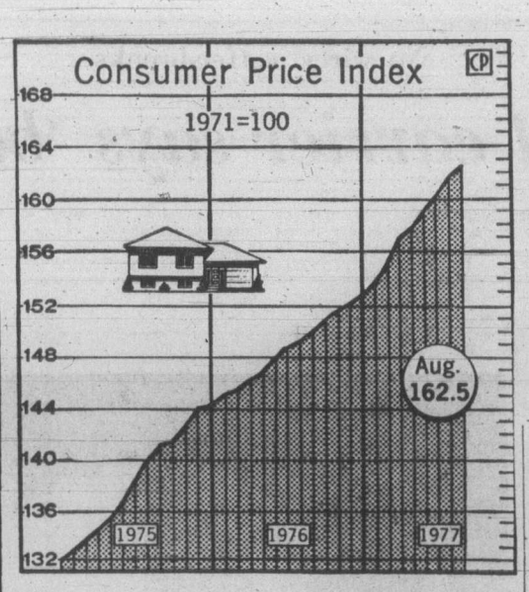
Big spenders keep it up

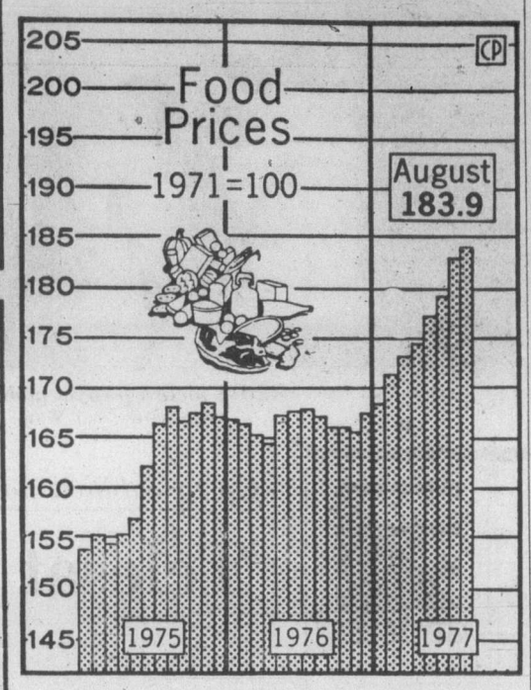
Canadians, despite signs of a slow economy, appear to be treating themselves rather well. Retail trade figures for June and restaurant receipts for the same month, released by Statistics Canada, show definite jumps from a year ago.

Sales increased in 23 of 28 sales groups with the largest gains shown by jewelry stores (28 per cent) and automotive garages (15 per cent). All provinces showed improvement and among cities, Vancouver was well up with a 6.8 per cent rise. Seasonally-adjusted total for month was $4,998 billion, virtually unchanged from May's $5.009 billion.

Restaurant sales were up 10.4 per cent to $221.5 million, with all provinces showing increases. B.C. restaurants did $23.6 million worth of business, up 10.3 per cent from June of a year before.







MOVING RIGHT ALONG are rates of increases in all areas of cost of living index and particularly in food items. CPI up by four-tenths of one per cent in August, however, made smallest monthly increase of year. Food prices for month rose by half of one per cent, mainly due to higher costs for fresh fruit, pork and poultry products.

Rolls Royce for Alberta?

EDMONTON (CP) — Rolls Royce (Canada) Ltd. would like to establish a facility in western Canada, probably in the Edmonton area, George Barker, vice-president of industrial and marine marketing in Montreal, said here.

"We would like to have an operation in Alberta," Barker said in a telephone interview. "It is a question of the right timing and the right location."

Barker confirmed that Rolls Royce has been doing cost studies of locating in the West. The firm is hoping to land a contract with the proposed Alaska Highway pipeline for its industrial turbines.

Last week, Sir Kenneth Keith, chairman of the board of the parent company, and Barker visited Edmonton and Calgary, where they met with officials of Foothills Pipeline, the firm which would build the Canadian portion of the proposed gas pipeline.

U.S. zeroing in on crime

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell Tuesday announced a major crackdown on white-collar and organized crime aimed particularly at "eliminating" enterprises involved in labor racketeering, public corruption and infiltration of businesses.

To combat one area of white-collar crime — what he called "program fraud" — Bell said the Justice Department may suggest that Congress "prepare law enforcement impact statements before adopting new programs in areas such as welfare and Medicaid.

Quashing reports the Justice Department's organized crime section may soon be disbanded, Bell said:

"We are revitalizing the department's strike forces on organized crime in 13 major cities and the respective U.S. attorney's offices which have organized crime units. We have established three field offices under parent strike forces in Phoenix, Las Vegas and Honolulu."

He outlined the department's crime-fighting efforts, and its stronger focus on white - collar and organized crime, in a speech to the International Downtown Executives Association.

"I have directed top officials in the department's criminal division to explore new ways to attack organized crime groups," Bell said. "We may need to direct new attention to the South and Southwest parts of the United States."

Bell said he had assigned a "high priority" to developing a comprehensive approach to prosecuting organized crime involvement in labor racketeering, public corruption and infiltration of legitimate businesses.

"This approach will include concentration on the flow of illegal funds from organized criminal activities, tracing them from the initial crime that produces the revenue to the end use — legal or illegal — of the profit," he said.

"I also want federal authorities to focus on eliminating the enterprises of organized crime rather than simply prosecuting individuals."

After Abraham

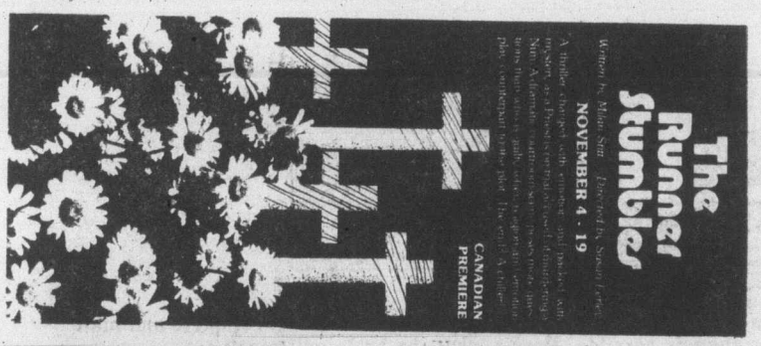
OCTOBER 7 - 22

Written by Ron Chudley

Directed by Ronald Ulrich

Dramatic rerun of the famous battle on the Plains of Abraham. An unusual toilet with Montcalm and Wolfe discussing their strategies and flash back scenes to 1759! It's a play depicting the struggle of two great cultures for a continent. Timely, topical and terrific!

WORLD PREMIERE



The Runner Stumbles

Written by Milner Sate Directed by Steven Ferrer

NOVEMBER 4 - 19

A thriller that's got comedy and plenty of suspense, as a Protestant priest and his wife are accused of murdering a nun. A dramatic confrontation between two men, two churches, guilt, love, hypocrisy and the law. A riveting play. You can't miss it!

FEBRUARY 3 - FEBRUARY 18

An office furnishings company and serious play about laughter and its professional practitioners. Night school aspirants get set for their first public performance in an English Music Hall setting. This play has been a smash hit in London, England and Eastern Canada and the U.S.A.

WEST COAST PREMIERE

And Nothing But...

Written by Maxine Fleischman

Directed by Lynne Gorman

MARCH 3 - MARCH 18

A college sophomore, a splash of surf and a bucket of tenderness exhaust the doctor, about the father and her mother when they meet by chance in London. It's their dilemma and how they value it makes this comedy simple, sensational, entertaining and for everyone!

No sweets, students ordered

AYLMER, Que. (CP) — Children attending Eardley elementary school here will have to forget about cookies and other sweet lunch-time desserts and settle for soda crackers.

In an effort to remedy last year's statistics placing Quebec school children at the top of the cavity list, the school has tightened its nutrition program and some parents in this community about 10 miles northwest of Ottawa are not pleased.

Ruth Kelly, school principal, said recently that children spotted bringing sweet food day after day are sent home after class with a request to leave the food at home.

U.S. ranchers gag on meat imports

WASHINGTON (CP) — Nine members of the U.S. Congress made personal appearances Tuesday at a trade commission hearing to urge greater restrictions on imports of Canadian and other cattle.

"Montana is becoming a dumping ground for surplus Canadian livestock," complained Representative Ron Marlenee (Rep. Mont.).

"The flood of beef across the border from Canada hits us harder than any other state," said Representative Max Baucus (Dem. Mont.).

Representative Mark Andrews (Rep. N.D.) said North Dakota cattlemen are also suffering from the invasion of Canadian cattle.

"This year when a North Dakota cattleman took a load of slaughter cows to town, it was not at all uncommon for him to wait in line behind six to eight truckloads from Canada," Andrews said.

Other members of Congress making personal appearances included Senator George McGovern (Dem., S.D.), one-time presidential contender; Senator John Melcher (Dem. Mont.) and representatives from Texas and Missouri.

Their arguments were supported by the applause of more than 200 South Dakota cattlemen who had travelled to Washington for the hearing.

In a statement to be read today president Boyd Anderson of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association argues that "at no time, have Canadian exports to the U.S. ever reached levels that could have any significant impact on U.S. domestic prices, something that cannot be said about U.S. exports to Canada."

Even in 1976, a year when Canadian and other countries' cattle and beef shipments to the United States jumped sharply, "Canadian slaughter cattle and beef exports amounted to less than one per cent of U.S. domestic production."

"Conversely, U.S. exports to Canada over the last six years have never been less than 3.2 per cent of our domestic supply and in 1973 rose to 8.3 per cent."

Anderson, a rancher from Fir Mountain, Sask., adds that U.S. tariffs on cattle and beef are already higher than Canadian tariffs applying to U.S. shipments and any further restrictive action "would greatly jeopardize the generally good trade relationship between the two countries."

Change in law would aid firing

Canadian Press

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Wednesday the government would change the Public Schools Act if a Delta junior high school counsellor who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana was allowed to keep his job.

McGeer told the Legislature, "I don't think the outcome to date is in the public interest."

He was commenting on the case of Frank Vaselenak, who was fired by the Delta School Board after he pleaded guilty to the drug charge.

However, Vaselenak appealed the board's finding, arguing that the Public Schools Act stated that a teacher could be fired only after he was convicted of a criminal offence.

He said that by pleading guilty to the charge, and subsequently receiving a conditional discharge, he was never convicted of any offence.

A board of referees agreed with the argument, and Vaselenak was reinstated.

"If adequate protection cannot be given to youngsters as a result of technicalities, it would be an obligation for the legislature to amend the law," said McGeer.

The minister said it was his understanding the Delta School Board would appeal, and he would await the result.

Conservative Scott Wallace (Oak Bay) noted that until 1972, all that was needed to dismiss a teacher was "just cause," and asked McGeer if he was willing to reinstate that provision.

"It would certainly be an intent of mine to introduce safeguards if loopholes in the act exist," answered McGeer.

Swan

Retired teacher is top citizen

NANAIMO — Retired high school principal Jim Swan has been named Citizen of the Year by the Greater Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce.

The award was announced Wednesday night at the chamber's installation meeting.

Swan, who retired as principal of Nanaimo District Senior Secondary School several years ago, has kept busier than ever with community activities, and it is for those activities that he was honored by the chamber.

The award is given annually.

Among his community activities, Swan lists membership in the Nanaimo and B.C. arts councils, the Gyro club and work on the miners reunion committee and the B.C. Day picnic committee.

During centennial year he served on that committee, and he has been chairman and treasurer of the Nanaimo Red Cross Society.

He has also been active in the Meals-on-Wheels program and he is a church warden at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Crossing is okayed

COURTENAY—Survey and design work will proceed immediately for the long-awaited second crossing of the Courtenay River.

The announcement was made in a press release on Tuesday by Alex Fraser, highways and public works minister.

Although city council had been pressing for definite word on when the project could be expected to proceed, Mayor William Moore expressed surprise at the speed with which the announcement had been made.

As was expected the crossing will be at 17th Street and will involve a new road system to connect 17th and the Island Highway at a spot near the Headquarters Road turnoff.

Design for the new bridge, which is expected to be a low-level span, will proceed immediately, Fraser said.

Tenders for the roadwork necessary for the crossing and the new bridge are expected to be called in May of 1978, with completion expected in the following year.

Union men occupy workshop

MONTREAL (CP) — About 250 city blue collar workers occupied two public buildings Wednesday to protest what they described as poor working conditions at a city workshop and lack of unemployment pay for some laid-off workers.

Riot police cleared about 150 workers out of a city work-shop in the east-end Rosemont district Wednesday evening. The workers had barricaded themselves in for 13 hours.

One worker, who refused to be identified, said the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) has been asking for better conditions in the workshop for about four years.

Both parties agreed to meet today to discuss working conditions.

TONITE! NOEL COWARD

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

Not surprisingly, the real star of Tonite! Noel Coward, is the late Sir Noel himself.

The breadth and quality of the man's output—selectively presented as it is in this musical revue—is staggering. And, of course, it's all wonderfully entertaining.

Coward is the man who did marvellous wry sendups like Mad Dogs and Englishmen, sharp social comment such as I Went to a Marvellous Party and the wickedly black Don't Let's be Beastly (to the Germans) but who still touches us with songs like Someday I'll Find You.

But not too far behind Coward in deserving applause are the revue's co-creators and directors, Drew Borland and Lloyd Nicholson. They've assembled about 50 songs into a pastiche chronicling Coward's career, flowing with purpose throughout the two-hour show. The songs are separated, or in many cases spring easefully from excerpts from Coward's plays, operettas, musicals or his own or others' biographies.

But the revue as performed opening night Wednesday lacked consistent charm, and impact. The four performers tended to wander and generally mistook Coward's offhand pacing as something akin to deliberate slowness. Yes, there was style, but only a hint of panache.

The revue format requires versatile and uptempo attractive performances. But this production is held back considerably by the male half of the cast. Both Vince Metcalfe and Mel Ericksen are too wooden to really let the revue take off. Metcalfe resorts too often to an air of glowing self-satisfaction to be effective, while Ericksen's style can be likened at times to an affected zombie.

The revue does considerably better with both Linda Kappus and Daphne Goldrick, offering an effective contrast in type and approach.

The directors have staged the revue in a small area of the McPherson stage, framed by footlights, with a grand piano and touring trunk as two contrasting focuses. It supplies a marvellous effect of much-needed intimacy for the revue in the cavernous McPherson. Costumes are stylishly simple, with elaborate hats doffed when needed.

Tonight! Noel Coward, plays nightly through Saturday. It makes for a nice, if sadly not sparkling, night out.

Sidney to push for breakwater

Chamber president Henry Vissers said the proposal would be discussed soon with Sidney council "to ensure our plans are in concert with what the town wants."

He said the location and environmental aspects would need considerable study.

The breakwater would provide protection for the government wharf at the foot of Beacon Avenue and stimulate provision of needed extra moorage for pleasure craft, he said.

The chamber hopes to get federal approval of a breakwater on the grounds that an increasing number of boats are tying up at the government wharf in summer.

The boats are sometimes exposed to heavy swells and in the fall are in danger from sudden storms.

Vissers said it seemed to him that money spent over the past few years on repairs and maintenance, along with the cost of installation and removal each year of the main floats and ramps, could have been put to better use constructing a breakwater.

He said it was only logical that protection be improved in a town which attracted so many boaters.

"We should be pressing full steam ahead with development of a top-notch marina, not sitting idly by while other centres develop such essential facilities."

"We certainly are not doing too much to keep visitors in the peninsula, especially the boating public," he said.

He suggested a marina similar to one at Friday Harbor.

He estimated the cost of a breakwater "in the millions," but said it would be money well spent.

Vissers said much of Sidney's future prosperity depended on a breakwater. Existing docking facilities at the foot of Beacon include about eight floats which can accommodate 25 to 30 boats. The basin, however, is subjected to high southeast and northwest winds.

"The entire Saanich peninsula stands to benefit by a breakwater," he said.

A decade ago, the transport department conducted a survey and recommended against a breakwater because there were ample private facilities for small craft in protected harbors further along the coast.

The Sidney chamber, however, said the department overlooked the fact that Sidney was a port of entry and as such was entitled to consideration.

Vissers said the chamber was informed recently that the department was considering not replacing floats removed this fall.

The trial on charges of fraud involving $700,000 in cut-price sales has been tentatively set to start Dec. 5 in Victoria County Court, and is expected to take two to three weeks.

Saanich police laid charges April 20 against 32-year-old Lauren Gail Phillips, 921 Leslie, in a matter of sales of motor vehicles, real estate, furniture, and motor vessels which, if all delivered, would have amounted to millions of dollars.

The allegations are that as many as 400 people may have been involved and that many Vancouver Island residents north of the Greater Victoria area as well as the Mainland were participants.

Progress-or-die expansion try at Racquet Club

The financially-troubled Racquet Club of Victoria is proposing a $750,000 expansion program to its members on the basis of "progress or die."

Club president John McBride said Wednesday that the proposal, which calls for construction of five covered tennis courts and eight racquetball courts in a single-storey building on club-owned land adjacent to the present property, will be placed before the club's 831 members at a general meeting Oct. 26.

The plan calls for the recruiting of 500 new members, each to be assessed the $600 joining fee. The money, to be used as interim financing, would be placed in trust until the balance could be raised through a financial institution.

McBride said a series of information meetings would be held to outline the proposal to the membership.

He said directors felt that, because of the popularity of both indoor tennis and racquetball, the membership drive should be successful, and with the new facility built, increased membership could be expected.

Bubble-type units had been investigated as a possibility but they were ruled out because they had not been proven, he said.

"The proposal is based on the covered tennis courts attracting about 500 new members," he said. "But we will have to do the initial selling job to get them. We have adopted the attitude of progress or die."

The building would be erected on land immediately west of the present facility.

Earlier this year the club failed in efforts to obtain a grant from Saanich to help it over its financial problems.

Aldermen, after several debates, rejected a recommendation of the finance committee that the club be given a grant of $21,826 to cover this year's school tax bill.

McBride said a membership drive in May brought in 200 members who joined to participate in the club's summer program.

"About 95 per cent have stayed on," he said, adding that "we enjoyed a great summer."

Sail Canadian, says labor

Shipping restrictions pressed by council

Coastal shipping should be carried out by Canadian-manned and Canadian-built vessels, the Victoria Labor Council said Wednesday night.

The council passed a unanimous resolution to go to the upcoming B.C. Federation of Labor convention in November and the next Canadian Labor Congress meeting in October that shipping in all Canadian coastal waters should be reserved for Canadian vessels. It was pointed out that the U.S. is preparing for heightened shipping activity in northern Canadian and Arctic waters.

The resolution was proposed by Neil Hindle of the boilermakers union. Council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan said following the meeting, attended by 57 delegates representing 24 unions, that the resolution was passed with the idea that the two senior labor bodies would have more influence than the Victoria Labor Council in Ottawa to pass legislation.

Ryan said the resolution was significant with respect to the unemployment situation in shipyards and in the West Coast and Canadian shipping industry. The Victoria Labor Council also passed a resolution that the Canadian government should re-establish a merchant marine.

The council discussed the unemployment situation at length. Bill Smalley, staff representative of the Canadian Labor Congress in Victoria, outlined for delegates a program by CLC to bring down unemployment and "put a human face" on national unemployment figures.

Smalley said the CLC would meet next month to "make employment the first political priority."

He said the CLC would attempt to "awaken everyone to the fact that behind the disgraceful national statistics of eight per cent unemployed there are stories of individual human suffering and pain."

The CLC, joined by unemployment committees of labour councils around the country, would:

- Localize Statistics Canada figures and personalize the cost of unemployment to individuals.
- Point out what unemployment costs each worker in dollars and cents and the billions of dollars in costs Canada in lost revenue.
- Examine the creation of local job opportunities, discuss alternate economic policies, and dig up the figures for the "hidden unemployed" around the country, the dropouts from the work force and those not registered with Canada Manpower.

"It's a misconception that unemployment hurts only those who are out of work," Smalley said.

Health fair opens today

Co-ordinated by the Health Education Centre, more than a dozen agencies and organizations involved in public health are participating. Fitness testing and counselling will be part of the fair.

This week, a million

Before the week is out somebody is going to walk into the Provincial Museum and find himself — or herself — commanding an awful lot of attention.

At least, government forecasters are predicting that the millionth visitor this year to the museum will make an appearance this week. When it happens it will mark the sixth consecutive year that the museum has had a million visitors.

Whoever ventures through the door at the magic moment will be greeted by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy and handed a momento.

Crater shrinks to pothole

Saanich police admitted Wednesday they gave incorrect information about an accident Tuesday involving a head-on crash between a police cruiser and a milk truck.

Police had said the cruiser hit a 15-foot-square excavation causing the car to cross the centre line and hit the oncoming truck.

The excavation was only about 14 to 15 inches wide, a police spokesman admitted.

Truck driver Donald France of Cobble Hill sustained minor bruises. The cruiser and the $20,000 truck are write-offs.

Regional probe panel includes Alf Hood

Former Victoria alderman Alf Hood is among five persons selected to carry out a probe into the role of regional government in B.C.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, who announced the examination of the regional government-concept recently, named the five-member committee Wednesday to undertake the task.

In addition to Hood, it is made up of Phil Farmer of Kaleden, Rendina Hamilton of Penticton, Daphne Phillips of Dawson Creek, and Ron Thompson of Galiano Island.

Curtis said all have background knowledge of local governments and regional functions.

The regional government set-up has been under attack for some time. Like others of its kind in the province, the Capital Region has been the target of those who claim it is an arbitrary system that is proving too costly.

The committee is to hold hearings throughout the province and report to Curtis by early next year.

Impounded trawlers may be freed today

The two Soviet factory trawlers impounded since the weekend at Ogden Point for fishing violations may be on their way again today.

Whether the vessels Druzhba and Ugolnyy are untied to ply the open seas again depends on whether arrangements for a $250,000 bond can be worked out today, defence lawyer Peter Lowry said in a Vancouver telephone interview Wednesday night.

Capt. Irkov Karpitsky and Capt. Yarosla Nedelsky were charged in provincial court Tuesday with entering and fishing in Canadian waters without authorization.

The two charges carry fines of up to $25,000, with possible forfeiture of catch and gear.

The 250-foot factory trawlers were boarded by fisheries officers at the weekend and directed to Ogden Point. Fisheries ministry officers have remained aboard since the impounding.

Lowry said he didn't know what plea the skippers would enter when the trial starts Jan. 10.

Justice ministry lawyer Digby Kier said bond for release of the two ships had been set at $250,000. "I can't see it being reduced beyond that," he said.

Developer modifying Ten Mile Point plan

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Reporter

A review of plans for a proposed large housing development in the Ten Mile Point area is in progress, developer Gordon Rolston said Wednesday.

The announcement comes a few days after the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association presented a petition to Saanich council seeking abandonment of the two multi-storey buildings proposed as part of 210 units planned for the 70-acre site at Minnie Mountain.

Rolston, managing director of Broadmead Farms Ltd. said Wednesday a review of the over-all plan was nearly complete and a number of alternatives were being considered.

"We should be able to put all the pieces together very soon," he said.

The contentious proposal, subject of two stormy public hearings earlier this year, would have been two apartment buildings of five and eight storeys containing 66 suites, 62 townhouses and 82 single-family homes.

Rolston told Cadboro Bay residents in July that the multi-million-dollar development would be built over 10 years, with single-family homes included in the first phase.

He said it was necessary to include the apartment buildings to make the development economic.

Residents have argued that the proposed development would greatly change the atmosphere of the community.

They told aldermen that they had been successful so far in barring apartment development and wanted to keep it that way.

A petition signed by 445 Ten Mile Point residents objected to the density proposed and to the inclusion of multiple-family dwellings in a development planned in a single-family area, almost rural in its atmosphere.

A survey by the association showed residents favoring single-family homes and solidly opposed to high-rise apartments.

Single-family-only dwellings were favored by 93 residents completing a questionnaire circulated by the association, while 53 persons expressed a desire for a combination of single-family and multiple-family dwellings.

Of those favoring multiple-family buildings, 36 preferred townhouses of a maximum of two storeys; 19 favored maximum two-storey garden apartments; 14 favored cluster housing, maximum two-storeys, and 16 favored multi-storey buildings.

In his brief to council, association president Howard Sturrock said 89 per cent of residents polled were opposed to multiple-family dwellings higher than two storeys.

"We believe a development can be worked out which is advantageous to both residents and the developer," he said, "but this requires as a first step the abandonment of the two multi-storey blocks."

Sturrock said the association believed that the development proposed by Rolston could lead to the transformation of Cadboro Bay from its present quiet, uncrowded exclusively single-family state into a teeming, noisy, unattractive community.

Court slashes claim

A Victoria engineering company which sued in B.C. Supreme Court for $106,726 in unpaid accounts from a developer has been awarded $4,875.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan, in a 30-page judgment, said the developer, Park Pacific Apartments Ltd., is entitled to $3,105 on its counterclaim.

The action was launched by Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. and the case was heard in Victoria last May and June.

The suit was for unpaid accounts in connection with the Dean Park Estates housing development in North Saanich between 1972 and 1976.

Ruttan said his calculations "are subject to error" and he invited corrections from Rodney Taylor, counsel for Ker, Priestman, and Cecil Branson, counsel for Park Pacific.

Ruttan said Ker, Priestman did not intend to charge on a percentage basis but on an hourly rate. But the company never communicated this information to the developer.

"They owed a duty to specify the terms of their hiring and never did so," he said.

But Park Pacific "owed a duty at least to itself to reach a more firm and clear understanding of their engineering contract. They started with no contractual understanding on fees at all . . ."

The result was that "there was no meeting of the minds and so no agreement on how fees were to be computed."

(This is a legal-Latin phrase for saying that a person is entitled to receive what he deserves or merits, if employed without a price being agreed on for services. The law considers the entitlement to be what is commonly paid in the particular locality for services of a like character).

Maple Leaf marchers recruiting

Currently recruiting members from girls in the 12-to-18-year age bracket, and community support, the group is renaming itself the Victoria All-Girls Ambassador Band.

Lessons will resume Oct. 1 at Belmont high school. Parents who want their daughters to learn music, marching and a sense of responsibility through attendance, practice, fund-raising and helping teammates are asked to contact organizer Dave Foster at 478-8793.

Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles are keeping things interesting in the only major league baseball division race that's really still up for grabs, the American League East.

Boston clipped New York Yankees 3-2 Wednesday night and Baltimore blanked Toronto Blue Jays 4-0, slicing the first-place Yankees' lead over the Orioles to two games and two and one-half games over the Red Sox.

Kansas City Royals made it next to a sure thing in the Western Division, ensuring a tie for the title by outslugging Minnesota Twins 10-5.

George Scott snapped a 2-2 tie with his 33rd home run with two out in the sixth inning, then turned in a spectacular double play at first base to end the game with the Yankees.

After the Yankees pulled into a 2-2 tie on Lou Piniella's two-out single in the sixth, Scott clubbed his first homer since Sept. 8 against starter and loser Mike Torrez, now 16-13.

Luis Tiant surrendered a homer to Piniella to open the fifth inning and then needed relief help from Jim Willoughby after Thurman Munson singled, Reggie Jackson walked and Chris Chambliss walked, all in the sixth inning.

Relief ace Bill Campbell took over in the seventh inning and checked the Yankees on three hits the rest of the way. Mickey Rivers singled in the Yankees' ninth but Scott dove to his right to spear Roy White's line drive, then beat Rivers back to the bag for the game-ending double play.

Lee May cracked a two-run homer, his 25th of the season, following a two-out walk to Ken Singleton in the fourth inning. The shot was Baltimore's first hit off Jef Byrd, 2-12. The 20-year-old Byrd, who has now lost eight straight games, allowed two more runs in the fifth after left fielder Steve Bowling lost Mark Belanger's line drive in the lights and it fell in for a double.

Darrell Porter's 16th home run of the year touched off a six-run seventh inning that clinched Kansas City's tie for first place in the West. Jim Colborn picked up his 18th win with relief help from Doug Bird. The Royals are 11 games in front of their closest competition, Texas Rangers, who bounced California Angels 9-1.

Meanwhile, Sixto Lezcano of Milwaukee hit the 3,430th homer of the year in the majors, breaking the all-time single season record. Minutes earlier, May's blast in Baltimore equalled the previous mark, set in 1970. Despite Lezcano's heroics, the Brewers went down to Seattle Mariners 11-4.

In the National League, Cincinnati Reds picked up a meaningless game on Los Angeles Dodgers in the Western Division with a 3-2 win as the Dodgers fell to San Francisco Giants 5-4. The Dodgers clinched the division title Tuesday.

Philadelphia Phillies, ahead of Pittsburgh Pirates by seven games in the East, lost to Chicago Cubs 2-0 as Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined on a seven-hit shutout.

Cougar coach not surprised when Breakers snap string

By STAN COOPER

Jack Shupe had a hunch Seattle Breakers would be a tough test Wednesday at Memorial Arena and the Victoria Cougar coach was correct.

Cougars saw their preseason win streak stopped at seven games when the former Kamloops Chiefs posted a 5-3 victory in a Western Canada Hockey League exhibition game played before about 1000 fans.

Breakers, playing only their fourth game since opening training camp earlier this month, had a decided edge in the first two periods and built leads of 2-0 and 4-0 before the Cougars got untracked.

Cougars were playing their fifth game in as many nights and their eighth in the last nine days and had several of their top holdovers sitting in the stands nursing injuries.

"This team (Seattle) is bound to be tougher than New Westminster," Shupe said prior to the game, referring to the defending league champion Bruins. Cougars knocked off the Bruins in four straight meetings since last Saturday although the Bruins also have several key players on the injury list.

Cougars showed some power in the final 20 minutes and narrowed the margin to 4-2 before Ryan Walter scored goals while holdover Steve Amiss finished up. Breakers held a 47-29 edge in shots.

Cougars had several excellent opportunities to score early in the game but their inexperience around the net showed.

Holdover centres Gary Lupul (ligament damage) and Dennis Fenske (sore hip) and big leftwinger Curt Fraser (sore shoulder) all sat out the game as did defenceman Leroy Heck (groin injury) and they were missed.

Best of the Cougar newcomers were Giroux and Mike Shields, both graduates of the B.C. Junior Hockey League Nanaimo Clippers. Giroux did yeoman service as a penalty killer while Shields, who bears a startling resemblance to former Cougar Danny Lucas, drew two assists and hit the goalpost on a third-period breakaway.

Cougars close out their preseason grind tonight in New Westminster and have Friday to prepare for the league opener here Saturday night against the Bruins. Shupe said several players will be reassigned following tonight's game.

In another Wednesday exhibition, Billings Bighorns (formerly Calgary Centennials) scored a 7-5 win over Lethbridge Broncos in the Alberta city.

his second goal of the game with less than four minutes to play to clinch the decision. Seattle's third win in preseason play.

Russ Wilderman also scored twice for the Breakers and Greg Dunn added the other goal.

Rookie Sid Giroux, with his third goal in as many games, Geordie Robertson and rookie Ron Johnson scored for the Cougars, who took 12 of 14 minor penalties assessed. Each team drew three majors and Cougar Brent Gogol was tagged with a misconduct and game misconduct after a second-period scuffle with Dunn.

Breakers scored once with a two-man advantage while Robertson and Giroux each scored with the Cougars shorthanded.

Newcomer Robin Frost played the first 30 minutes for the Cougars and gave up two

Like it or not they're in book

Jogging into record book is Sixto Lezcano of Milwaukee Brewers whose two-run homer Wednesday night was the 3,430th major-league homer of the season, breaking the all-time single-season record. A disconsolate Doc Medich in background will probably go into the book too, as having given up the hit.

Boston coach finds —

U.S. players hungrier

FITCHBURG, Mass. (CP) — American-born players entering the National Hockey League display more dedication and heart than do their Canadian-born counterparts, Boston Bruins' coach Don Cherry said Wednesday.

"Canadian-born players entering the NHL these days take everything for granted," Cherry said. "All these No. 1 draft picks come to training camp with swelled heads.

"The American kid, on the other hand, knows where he stands, knows he's fighting an uphill battle. Slowly but surely he's starting to win."

The Bruins have two U.S.-born players on their roster, Mike Milbury and Earl Anderson and have invited five more to their training camp here.

"The American boy is a lot hungrier, a lot tougher," Cherry continued. "He hasn't polished his skills as finely as the Canadian player, but he makes up for it in desire."

Milbury, a native of Brighton, Mass. joined Boston four years ago from Colgate University. Next to Brad Park he is considered the Bruins best defencemen.

"Milbury is an example of what I'm talking about," Cherry said. "He joined our organization technically unsound and developed after two years in the minors. His desire to succeed paid off."

Cherry, NHL coach-of-the-year in 1976, predicts Americans will comprise 25 per cent of all NHL players within "three to four years."

In the first six rounds of this year's NHL amateur draft, 18 players from U.S. colleges and universities were selected.

Speedway season ends on weekend

The veteran driver takes a 211 point lead into the final weekend of the Vancouver Island racing season but still needs at least a fair showing in the final two races to clinch the title.

Western Speedway completes its season with the double-points championship main event Saturday. It was expected to be the final race of the season but the super-stocks were rained out at Nanaimo last week and a double-points race will be held at the Hub City Sunday.

A driver sweeping all the races and time trials can earn a total of 232 points each night. Jim Caudwell hopes to do just that and pass Collins but he also had to worry about being caught by third-place Jerry Ferrie who is only 120 points out of second place.

The remaining positions in the top ten are also up for grabs. Only 34 points separate fourth-place Ron Fleet and fifth-place Gary Bemister.

The hobby-stocks are also running Saturday at Western as they wind up their season with a double-points race. John Robillard of Campbell River has clinched the championship but George Shillito is in second place only 15 points ahead of fellow Victorian Al Miller.

Carew ailment 'not serious'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Major league batting leader Rod Carew is suffering from lymphangitis of the right forearm, Dr. Leonard J. Michienzi, Minnesota Twins club physician said Wednesday.

The 31-year-old hitting star awoke Tuesday morning with a red streak down the inside of his right arm, a condition which made it difficult for him to hold a bat, but a spokesman for the American League baseball team said the condition was not serious and there are no complications.

Carew was sent home from Kansas City Tuesday night and examined by Dr. Michienzi Wednesday morning. He did not play in the Twins' 4-2 loss to the Royals Tuesday night, and it had already been announced that he would miss Wednesday's game because of Yom Kippur, a Jewish religious holiday.

The Twins have Thursday off, so team officials felt it was best to have Carew return to Minneapolis.

"He did not become ill or anything like that," said Twins' manager Gene Mauch. "He had a red streak running down the inside of his right arm and we were concerned about it, that's all."

Carew was taken to a Kansas City hospital, but returned to the ball park briefly before leaving for home Tuesday night.

The Twins spokesman said Carew was taking antibiotics and responding rapidly, They expect him back in the lineup by Friday at the earliest and no later than Sunday.

Carew, who is hitting .385, flirted with the .400 mark midway through the season before levelling off. He has already won five AL batting titles and has clinched his sixth this season.

Soviets lose but win title

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia beat the Soviet Union 5-4 Wednesday night, but the Soviets won the Rude Pravo newspaper's hockey tournament on the strength of aggregate score.

Both the Soviets and the Czechs split four games and had six points in the final tabulation.

Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association, the third participating team, lost all their matches in the tournament.

Bruins acquire winger

Reardon, 18, previously played for Calgary Cowboys of the Alberta Junior Hockey League, and his WCHL rights were owned by Billings Bighorns.

The Montana team gets defenceman Chris Kelcher, 17, from the Bruins, and Kelcher will be traded to Regina Pats of the WCHL. Regina then will compensate Calgary for the loss of Reardon.

Names of other players involved in the transaction were not available.

Argonauts acquire Willis

FORMER B.C. LION Slade Willis has been acquired by Toronto Argos in a Canadian Football League deal with Winnipeg Blue Bombers. The Bombers will receive one of the territorial protected players Argos will declare prior to the 1978 college draft in exchange for the 27-year-old wide receiver-slotback . . . John Brockington, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in each of his first three NFL seasons but has been a disappointment the last three years, has been cut by Green Bay Packers after clearing waivers . . . Diane Jones Konihowski and her husband, flanker John Konihowski of Edmonton Eskimos of the CFL, have joined the athletic staff of University of Alberta. John will serve as coach-administrator for the track team while Diane, one of the world's leading pentathlon athletes, will assist in regular physical education course instruction . . . Joe Namath will be back at quarterback Sunday when Los Angeles Rams face Philadelphia Eagles at the Coliseum. Namath, who spent 12 years with New York Jets, started his first game as a Ram last Sunday when Los Angeles bowed 17-6 to Atlanta Falcons . . . Nate Thurmond, veteran Cleveland Cavaliers centre, has announced his retirement after 14 years in the National Basketball Association. The 36-year-old finished his career for Cleveland last season after having played for Chicago Bulls and the old San Francisco Warriors .

Captain Yvan wants to hoist Cup

* * *

Back from disc injury, Cournoyer eager to start

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvan Cournoyer is entering his third season as captain of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, a position that carries some prestige and considerable responsibility but last season he missed out on the best part of the job.

Cournoyer was sidelined after spinal disc surgery when acting captain Serge Savard circled the ice at Boston Garden, displaying hockey's biggest prize to Bruins fans who had just seen their heroes fall in four straight games to the Canadiens.

"They still owe me the chance to skate around with the Stanley Cup," Cournoyer said as the Canadiens opened training camp at the Forum this week.

Cournoyer, who carried the Cup on the victory lap in 1976 in Philadelphia after a final-series sweep against the Flyers, won't get his next chance at least until next spring, but he is ready, with the rest of the Canadiens, to earn the honor.

"I've done light workouts during the summer, after the doctor told me I could," Cournoyer said. "Then I started skating and I have a few special exercises I have to do. But I want to play, that's what I want to do."

The 33-year-old right winger played only 60 games last season, scoring 25 goals and adding 28 assists for 53 points. But he was in pain every stride of the way.

"Right at the start of the year I almost fell. You know how, when you're off balance, you throw your body back up quickly? Well, that's what I did and I felt a pain in my leg.

"I thought I'd pulled a muscle again, probably a hamstring. I kept playing but it got worse and worse. I went for x-rays and they didn't find anything, so I just kept playing and playing, hoping it would go away."

Cournoyer stood straight with his hands at his side. Then he moved his hands down his legs four inches.

"I was playing straight. If I got down this far, it was like somebody shoving a needle into me.

"I just kept playing but I wasn't shooting well because I couldn't put any weight on my right leg. In March, it got so bad that I couldn't even walk. I was in pain all the time. It was like a toothache that never stops.

"Then my leg started getting numb. I went to see Dr. (Doug) Kinnear at the hospital. He said the disc was coming out and pushing on the nerve."

After the operation in March, Cournoyer went to work on a stationary bicycle to work himself back into shape. "I couldn't run because of the jarring, so I hardly played tennis at all this summer and only about five or six rounds of golf. But I did a lot of riding on that bicycle."

The native of Drummondville, Que., said such hazards are part of the price he pays for his style of play, a skating mania incorporating a fast break that earned him the nickname The Roadrunner.

"I play on my speed. When you do that, injuries have got to happen. It's the same with Murray Wilson. He plays on his speed too. Imagine if you had a car that you only ran at full speed, or a racehorse that you raced every day. If you're going at 100 per cent all the time, something has got to give every so often."

Cournoyer has been skating with such team-mates as Steve Shutt, Bob Gainey and Jacques Lemaire for several weeks in preparation for training camp and said he is ready to resume the career that has seen him score 402 goals and add 401 assists for 803 points in 885 regular-season games.

What leisure time he has, after 80 regular-season games, the playoffs, his captain's duties and a heavy public relations schedule, Cournoyer devotes to his wife Ginette, son Yani, 5, and daughters Marie-France, 7, and Melanie, 3.

A fair portion of their elegant home looking onto the St. Lawrence River was built by Cournoyer himself, who still is remodelling it. With summer over and training camp under way, however, the home work schedule is bound to suffer.

Lucas to stay in east deal decision pending

The final blow came Wednesday when it was reported that Lucas, an outstanding right winger with the Western Canada Hockey League club three seasons ago, will line up with Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Major Junior "A" Hockey League for the upcoming campaign.

The 19-year-old resident of Powell River joined the Greyhounds at training camp on Sept. 6 despite being on the protected list of the Cougars. He said he considered himself a free agent because he had not signed a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association playing card in 1976.

Angelo Bumbacco, Greyhounds general manager, said Wednesday Lucas would be playing with his team but terms of the settlement with the Cougars were not disclosed.

Bumbacco and Ed Chynoweth, president of the WCHL, reached the agreement. Chynoweth acted for the Cougars after Bumbacco and Victoria general manager Bob Briscoe could not agree on a settlement.

Briscoe denied Wednesday night that a deal had been completed and said that a decision will be made today in Vancouver at a meeting of Cougar owners.

Lucas, who first joined the Cougars as a 15-year-old in the 1973-74 season, scored 57 goals and drew 56 assists the following season to help the team win its first, and only, Western Division championship. The 113 points in regular season play is a WCHL record for a 16-year-old player.

But the big winger had problems the following season, although scoring 20 goals and drawing 24 assists in the first 32 games. He left the Cougars at the Christmas break after then manager-coach Pat Ginnell had criticized his play on a post-game radio interview.

Lucas sat out the rest of the season then obtained a Hockey Canada scholarship to attend the University of British Columbia. He played for the Thunderbirds of the Canada West Universities Athletic Association last season and enjoyed fair success as a rookie.

He was telephoned three times by new Cougar coach Jack Shupe in the last few weeks and indicated he was interested in playing junior hockey in his draft year. But, as things turned out, not for the Cougars.

When contacted Wednesday, Shupe expressed disappointment with the development but said he hadn't been counting on Lucas joining the team after hearing the original reports from Sault Ste. Marie.

"I don't think Dan Lucas would have had any trouble making the team but I can't worry about that. I've got to think about the players who are here and want to play for the Cougars," Shupe said.

Lucchesi sues Randle

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former baseball manager Frank Lucchesi of Texas Rangers filed a civil damage suit Wednesday against Lenny Randle, the player who punched him in a spring exhibition game in March.

James E. Shepherd, Lucchesi's Orlando lawyer, filed the suit in circuit court here and said the papers would be served on Randle in New York, where the infielder plays for the National League's New York Mets.

Although Lucchesi is reported to be seeking $200,000 in damages, Shepherd said: "We are certainly not bound to that figure."

Randle was playing for the Rangers under Lucchesi when the incident took place at Orlando's Tinker Field before an American League exhibition game on March 28 between the Rangers and Minnesota Twins.

The 50-year-old Lucchesi suffered a fracture of the cheekbone, a cracked rib and other cuts and bruises. He was in hospital for five days.

Randle was suspended from baseball for a month, fined $10,000 and eventually waived out of the American League. He then signed a five-year contract with the Mets.

Lasorda takeover heralded '77 pennant drive

He picked starters early and it paid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers' blistering start of the 1977 season officially began on April 7, but their rise to the championship of the National League's Western Division actually began more than six months earlier.

Tommy Lasorda, who claims to bleed Dodger Blue and believes in the Great Dodger in the Sky, was appointed to succeed Walter Alston as manager of the Dodgers last Sept. 29.

In his own words, he's been sticking his neck out ever since.

"I told our players all winter long that we were going to win it," recalls Lasorda almost a year after the dedicated Dodger got the job he wouldn't trade for any other. "I knew I was inheriting a team of great talent. I said it because I believed it and I wanted the players to believe it."

Lasorda, who turns 50 Sept. 22, did more than just express confidence as he prepared for his first year as a big-league manager. Before spring training began, he told his team — a club that finished 10 games behind World Series champion Cincinnati last year and 20 games in back of the Reds in 1975 — which players would be in the starting lineup.

Throughout the spring, eight regulars were grouped together. They started exhibition games and were taken out as a group. They weren't divided during intrasquad games.

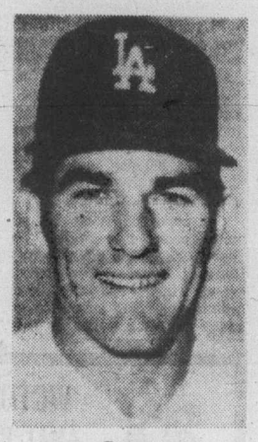
As Lasorda planned, the team was ready when the season began. The Dodgers won 17 of their 20 games in April and for all intents and purposes, Big Red Machine or not, the race was over.

On May 1, the Reds trailed the Dodgers by 7½ games. They haven't been closer than 6½ games since.

"My thinking on naming the starting team before spring training was that I believe when players come to the park not knowing if they're going to play or not it causes confusion," says Lasorda. "I wanted these eight players to be very close.

"Love, respect, togetherness and spirit are important elements. These are things that don't show up the statistics. I'm proud of what our palyers have done. They knew in spring training what it was going to take to win."

A number of Dodgers have had exceptional years. Los Angeles may have four players — Steve Garvey, Ron Cey, Reggie Smith and Dusty



Garvey

. . . more power

Baker — with 30 home runs or more each, a feat never before accomplished in baseball history.

Lasorda said last spring that the Dodgers had the finest starting pitchers in the majors. The big five haven't let Lasorda down, leading the Dodgers staff to the best earned-run average in baseball.

Rick Rhoden, Don Sutton, Doug Rau, Burt Hooton and Tommy John, the Dodgers' starting rotation, have more than 70 victories and fewer than 40 losses among them.

The difference in the performance of a number of players this season compared to 1976 is staggering.

Baker hit only .239 with four homers and 39 runs-batted-in last year. He currently is hitting some 40 points higher with seven times as many homers and more than twice as many runs batted in.

Smith split 1976 between the Dodgers and St. Louis and had 18 homers, 49 RBIs and hit .253. He's now well above .300, is approaching 30 home runs and has surpassed 80 RBIs.

John, 10-10 a year ago after missing more than a season following surgery on his left elbow, is nearing 20 victories, has an outstanding earned-run average and is a contender for the Cy Young Award.

Cey spearheaded the fast start with a major league record 29 RBIs and a .423 batting average in April. Although his average dropped off drastically, he's driven in more than 100 runs.

Lasorda asked Garvey, who collected over 200 hits in each of the past three seasons, to generate more power this year. Garvey, who also has more than 100 RBIs, surpassed his previous career high of 21 homers on July 2.

And so it goes.

Bill Russell, who Lasorda says he "wouldn't trade for any shortstop in the world," is having his best season. Davey Lopes has, in Lasorda's words, "made our offence go." Steve Yeager has excelled on defense and contributed some timely hits.

Russell

Rick Monday has been bothered by a back ailment since the middle of June, but before that he had eight game-winning hits. Lee Lacy, Glenn Burke, recent acquisition Vic Davalillo and Teddy Martinez, before being sidelined with a knee injury, have made significant contributions.

Reliever Charlie Hough provided excellent help from the bullpen during the first half of the season, accounting for 10 saves by early July. When he became ineffective, Mike Garman, Elias Sosa and Lance Rautzhan picked up the slack.

Lasorda is supportive of just about everyone, but he has special praise for Smith, Baker, John and Russell.

"Reggie has to be considered for the Most Valuable Player award," says Lasorda. "Dusty is the Comeback Player of the Year, without a doubt. Tommy should win the Cy Young Award and Bill is the most underrated player in all of baseball.

"But it's difficult to single anyone out. Everyone has contributed."

Different players carried the team at times during the season. When someone slumped, someone else was there to pick up the slack.

And during July and August, when the team was able to win only three more games than it lost, the Reds were unable to take advantage.

Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson, whose team has had pitching problems and hasn't been able to come up with the timely hit on many occasions, has been talking about next year for some time now.

He could have began looking ahead to 1978 more than four months ago. Blue is getting the Red out this year. Dodger Blue.

Brett signs Angels pact

ANAHEIM (AP) — Left-handed pitcher Ken Brett has signed a contract with California Angels through 1979.

Brett, 29, who was a free agent until the signing, was acquired from Chicago White Sox on June 15. He had a 12-13 record this season with a 4.46 earned run average before Tuesday night's game against Texas. His record with the Angels was 6-8.

Jacklin may quit U.S. golf circuit

LONDON (AP) — Tony Jacklin may give up playing golf in the United States, he said Wednesday.

"My schedule is crasy and I am seriously thinking of turning my back on America and playing more in Europe," Jacklin said. "I am spreading myself in two ways and trying to qualify for big European tournaments like the World Match play championship on U.S. standards. There are some good tournaments in Europe now and things look rosy in Britain."

Jacklin smashed the course record with a seven-under par 64 in the English Professional national championship at nearby Sandy Lodge Wednesday.

Three nations improve hopes of qualifying for World Cup

Scotland, Northern Ireland and Poland improved their chances of reaching next year's World Cup soccer final in Argentina, each winning a qualifying match Wednesday.

Scotland's Asa Hartford scored the winning goal at the 35-minute mark in Glasgow, enabling his club to down Czechoslovakia 3-1. The Scots, who knocked the Czechs out of the last Cup tournament four years ago, now need to win their remaining European Group Seven match against Wales next month to ensure a trip to South America.

Meanwhile, controversial star George Best made his first appearance in Belfast in seven years, helping Northern Ireland to a 2-0 win over Iceland in a Group Four qualifying match. Poland hammered Denmark 4-1 in a Group One encounter.

Despite one or two moments that encouraged the partisan crowd, Best gave a moderate performance as the Irish club struggled to break down Iceland's stubborn 10-man defence. After 62 minutes, Chris McGrath took a head pass from Best to score the first goal and Sammy McIlroy headed the ball into the net nine minutes later to end scoring.

The Poles wiped out Denmark's faint remaining hope of reaching the finals and preserved its own record with a fifth consecutive win.

Only Portugal could theoretically catch Poland in Group One and to do so must win in Poland and beat Denmark and Cyprus.

Curling roundup

T-Bird bonspiel still has openings

By TOM KEYSER

Thirty-two openings remain for entries in the CJVI - Thunderbird Mixed Bonspiel at Playland Curling Club Oct. 6-10, the first major event of the 1977-78 curling season.

Sixty-four rinks will compete in the four-event bonspiel, with the major prize a week for two at the Canadian Men's Championships in Vancouver March 5-11.

League play opens at Playland Sept. 30, with the men's bonspiel scheduled for Dec. 8-11, the women's Nov. 17-20 and the cash bonspiel Nov. 11-14.

Victoria-area rinks will serve as sites for the Totem Bonspiel, sponsored by the Racquet Club of Victoria, and slated for Nov. 23-27.

Two rinks qualifying from the Totem will move to the Pacific Coast Curling Association playoffs, after indicating intent when entering the Totem. There are 128 openings for the Totem.

Playland will host the South Island Mixed Playdowns Jan. 20-22, now moving to a bonspiel format from a club system.

The Association of Competitive Curlers (Super League) opens its season at the Racquet Club Oct. 18 as eight rinks meet in a double round robin.

And for the curlers wishing to hone skills before competition begins in earnest, the annual Silver Broom School opens at Playland next Monday and continues through Wednesday.

House-cleaning planned by Kroc

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Owner-president Ray Kroc, vowing to "turn this club inside out," hinted Wednesday that San Diego Padres may trade players freely.

"I think we are in a position to deal from great strength," said Kroc after assuming active control of the National League baseball team. "We have half a dozen people we could deal."

They are reported to include starters Mike Ivie, who wants to be traded, and Dave Winfield.

The resignation Tuesday of Buzzie Bavasi as president, described by Kroc as "disappointing," may have stemmed in part from comments made by Bavasi about manager Alvin Dark and overheard by Kroc's wife, Joan.

When Dark was named in May to succeed John McNamara, Kroc told the new field boss to go directly to the owner with problems. McNamara dealt only with Bavasi.

Mrs. Kroc took issue with Bavasi's comment praising Dark a few nights ago, according to persons who heard them.

"Oh, come on, Buzzie, don't stand there and be such a hypocrite," the owner's wife was quoted as saying. "Everyone in this room knows how you really feel about Alvin. Everyone knows you don't like him."

Bavasi responded: "That's not true." But after their exchange, he said: "You'll have my resignation in the morning."

Bavasi, 61, organized the San Diego expansion team after 17 years as general manager of the Dodgers' organization in Brooklyn and Los Angeles.

Bavasi owned one-third of the Padres and was the autonomous boss under the previous owner, and Kroc kept him on as president after buying the club in 1974. Kroc once said he promised to leave Bavasi "15 per cent" of the club in his will, but that may have been in jest.

The only comment Bavasi made about his future was that he would take a vacation "from baseball" and stay in San Diego.

Kroc, 74-year-old chairman of McDonald's fast-food chain, said he will keep his manager and office staff.

As the Padres struggled along in fifth place in the National League West Division in recent weeks, at least 10 players have asked to be traded.

Comox victim of no-hitter

WINNIPEG (CP) — Pitchers on the two undefeated teams in the Canadian Forces softball tournament each hurled no-hitters Wednesday to maintain their flawless records at 3-0 in the round-robin competition.

Sonny McLean was one walk away from a perfect game as he led CFB Greenwood of the Atlantic Region to a 2-0 win over CFB Comox, the team representing the Pacific Region.

CFB Shilo, the prairie regional representatives, eked out a 2-1 win over Canadian Forces Station Sennetaire of the Quebec Region.

Shilo remains alone in second place with a 2-1 record while Baden is in third with 1-2. Comox and Sennetaire remain winless at 0-3.

The two teams with the best records will meet Saturday to determine the tournament championship.

Hardy Aastrom

MONTREAL (CP) — Hardy Aastrom admits he'll find those goalmouth scrambles especially hectic, at least for the early stages of the 1977-78 National Hockey League season.

Aastrom, 26-year-old Swedish-born netminder with New York Rangers, said recently during a break in the Rangers' rookie training camp schedule that his lack of English is among his biggest worries.

"I cannot find the words, the expressions to tell my players what is happening," Aastrom said somewhat haltingly.

"If I am screened, I don't know what to shout. If an opposing player is on one of my players, I can't think of the words. That is a priority—I must learn the proper language to help the team."

But if that handicap is overcome at the rookie camp in suburban Pointe Claire or at the team's full training camp in New York starting Sunday, Aastrom may well be the Rangers' top goalkeeper this season.

"I didn't come over here to be No. 2," said the native of Skelleftea in northern Sweden. "I came to work hard and to be No. 1."

Rangers general manager John Ferguson, who has handed the coaching duties to Jean-Guy Talbot this year, apparently has decided that the top job is Aastrom's to lose.

"I like him and he works hard," said Ferguson, for whom hard work was a trade mark during his NHL playing days with Montreal Canadiens.

Aastrom inevitably will be compared with Goeran Hoegosta, his Swedish national club team-mate who is joining New York Islanders this season. The New York media already are promoting their encounter in a Rangers-Islanders rookie game.

"I don't know the reasons, but if Fergy chose me over Hoegosta, then I feel good," Aastrom said. "And I also feel I must prove to Fergy that he was right in choosing me."

Ferguson opted for Aastrom and the goalkeeper is glad he did.

"Since I was a child, I knew about the Rangers. They became my team and I wanted to be one of them. I am where I have always wanted to be . . . if I make it, and I didn't come here not to make it."

Now the six-foot, 175-pound goalkeeper is preparing to face North American professionals on a regular basis in NHL action, but he is not overly awed by the likes of Montreal's Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt.

"They are great hockey players but they have two arms and two legs. I have two arms and two legs, so we are even. I also have a lot of good players on my team, so I can't get something in my head about worrying about certain people."

Aastrom could have easily gone to the World Hockey Association, because Winnipeg Jets, who boast numerous Scandinavian players, wanted him. But Aastrom sought security.

"I want a full, long career over here. Aside from the fact I have always wanted to be a Ranger, the future is too uncertain in the WHA. It could die in a year or two and where would I be?"

Ali decked by Ellis

DEER LAKE, Pa. (AP) — Muhammad Ali was knocked down twice Wednesday by Jimmy Ellis, the retired former World Boxing Association champion, during a training camp sparring session, a spokesman for Ali's camp reported.

Ali, the world heavyweight champion who defends his title Sept. 29 at Madison Square Garden against Earnie Shavers, first went down from a left uppercut, then from a right cross before quitting for the day, the spokesman said.

Ali was quoting as saying: "I was pressing too hard. I worked out too much on the floor before going into the ring." Ali said he had a crick in his neck from the knockdowns.

Sanderson expects to have big year

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran Derek Sanderson, with visions of another six-figure National Hockey League contract, says he is capable of having a big year with Vancouver Canucks.

Sanderson reported to training camp here Monday after the Canucks failed to pick up their option on his contract, meaning Sanderson will be a free agent at the end of the 1977-78 season.

"I think if I can have an 80 or 90-point season I'll be able to get a contract over $100,000," Sanderson said after the team's first scrimmage.

"I'll never get a security (long-term) contract again, but what the hell, the day of the big money is dead."

The Canucks acquired Sanderson late last season from St. Louis Blues after Sanderson had been demoted to Kansas City of the Central Hockey League.

Champ keeps ring crown

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Gratien Tonna of France won the European middleweight boxing title Wednesday night when defending champion Alan Minter of Britain suffered a cut on the forehead and the bout was stopped by the referee in the eighth round.

The victory was Tonna's 43rd in 48 professional fights, while the loss was the sixth for the 26-year-old English southpaw.

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

BONN — B.C.'s economic mission was staggered by a giant open-pit brown coal mine just outside Cologne.

They were staggered not only by the size but by the incredible reclamation job by the Rhienbraun Mining Co. at its Fortuna-Garsdoff open cut mine.

By B.C. standards, it's doubtful if the mine would ever be regarded as economically feasible. But in energy-short Europe with a technology by which 30 per cent of all German electrical energy is produced from brown coal, the coal is as valuable as Arab oil.

While the huge open scar in the rural landscape between Cologne and Bonn looks as ghastly as any open pit mining operation, the land in the wake of the mine has been restored in an efficient way.

For example, there were no lakes in this area when the mine was first started in the 1950s. Now there are 42 lakes of varying sizes from small ponds for children to boating and fishing lakes several miles long.

In effect, the open pit is a moving crater several hundred metres deep and several hundred metres wide. It moves by the force of ever-churning bucketwheel excavators weighing close to 8,000 tons that are 200 metres long and at their highest point 70 metres high.

The wheel of the excavating bucket is 21 metres in diameter and stands about as high as a four-storey building.

They move about 300 million tons of overburden or topsoil to retrieve 120 million tons of coal.

Mine officials told Premier Bennett, Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe that it takes four years of planning before a mine such as Fortuna-Garsdoff can be brought into operation.

Less than four years after it has moved through the countryside with seeming devastation, the mine has restored the land to its original beauty, and sometimes improved on it.

To date the mining company has lifted 20,000 people out of the path of the operation and settled them down on the restored land behind it in modern homes in well-planned communities.

They expect to move another 10,000 people before it's all over. And so far less than one per cent of the transferred citizens have complained about moving.

With energy sources so rare in Germany, the government has given the mining company the right of expropriation, "but we don't like that way," a mining offficial said. "We think we have shown people that we can give them a better way of life in more enjoyable surroundings."

After viewing the mine from the rim of its leading edge and from beside a towering Jules Verne bucketwheel excavator, the economic mission was taken on a tour of land in the path of the moving crater, land immediately in its wake, and of land and communities that a few years ago were actually part of the huge mine.

The countryside rolled gently, the hills were green with meadows and trees. Although it was a cold grey day, the lakes were in use. Mothers, fathers, dogs and children walked the trails, wandering in and out of the forests and around the lake.

The open pit mine was of particular interest to the B.C. group because similar technology is being advocated for the Hat Creek coal deposit. If Hat Creek is mined, its coal will also be used to produce electricity.

German scientists and engineers, like their British counterparts, are not stopping at coal for the burning. They can already manufacture gasoline and oil derivatives.

The British are already producing gasoline at a pilot plant and are forecasting that before the end of the century, B.C. will be doing the same from its Hat Creek deposits.

Bennett hopes high for West German deals

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

GENEVA, Switzerland — Premier Bennett said Wednesday that it might be a year to 18 months before the long-term effects of his economic mission to Europe were felt.

"But the short-term effects are going to be felt pretty quickly, I think," he said.

He made the statement during a brief pause in travelling at Dusseldorf airport before proceeding to Geneva, where he will be brought up to date on world trade and tariff talks.

Bennett refused to say in which areas the German industrialists he met were most interested. "They are just talking to us extremly bluntly, they want positive responses and they are very serious," the premier said.

Bennett said he expected the first response from German businessmen to come in the area of small business. "I think you will see some action at the relatively small level in a very short time," Bennett said.

Wednesday morning the premier, Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe met with leading German industrialists at the headquarters of the Federation of German Industry.

Host for the meeting was Dr. Hans Gunther Sohl, deputy chairman of the group, sitting in for his boss, Hans Martin Schlever, who was captured by leftist terrorists in a bloody attack more than two weeks ago.

The press was excluded from the morning business sessions, but was allowed to attend a luncheon.

While specific topics were carefully avoided by both Canadians and Germans, there was little doubt about the air of optimism from both sides.

Present at the meeting were around 50 top German industrialists and bankers, including representatives of Krupp, Siemens, pulp and paper manufacturers and top steel producers.

Phillips said he was pleased with the morning session. "Although I can't give you the details, I can tell you that these people have confidence in B.C. and things are looking good."

One of the things looking good was in the steel manufacturing field. Germany produces its own coking coal at present, but by 1982, its supplies will decline rapidly, and it is at that time that Phillips hopes Germany will look to B.C. for its supplies.

Bennett
. . . talking serious

Altsough Wednesday's meetings were held at the headquarters of the kidnapped industrialist, there was a surprising absence of security guards.

All members of the Canadian mission and the press were kept within a central security area, but there were no armed guards present, despite the fact that the local theory is that if Schleyer is still alive, he is being held in the immediate area.

The lack of security at the headquarters was in sharp contrast to the security in Bonn Tuesday night, when Bennett and other members of the B.C. economic mission dined with Canadian Ambassador John Halstead at his residence, while the media and ministers' wives dined a few doors away with an embassy official.

Police cars escorted the official cavalcade to Halstead's residence, shadowy figures strolled the quiet streets, and stood on each corner, and helicopters patrolled overhead, even after dark.

But that was in Bonn, the seat of government in West Germany. A few miles away in Cologne, where it all happened, nobody seemed unduly concerned.

Following the meeting in Cologne, the B.C. party split up, with Finance Minister Wolfe and his deputy Gerry Bryson heading back for Frankfurt and detailed talks with German bankers, while Bennett and Phillips flew to Switzerland for trade and tariff talks.

Both sections of the group will be united in Paris today, for the last two days of talks before the mission ends Friday afternoon.

Quebec Grit attacks PM's 'yes-man' cabinet

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday received a stinging rebuke from a party member, who accused him of having named a weak cabinet of yes-men unable to guide Canada "in a time of its deepest trouble."

Hal Herbert, Quebec Liberal MP from Vaudreuil, charged in a letter to Trudeau that the cabinet "is surely the weakest federal cabinet since prior to the war years.

"Undoubtedly it is a cabinet ready to say yes, but it is not a group that can inspire this nation in a time of its deepest trouble," he said in his Sept. 19 letter made public Wednesday.

Herbert accused French-speaking members of the Trudeau cabinet of being in "almost tacit support" of secessionist Quebec Premier Rene Levesque while Warren Allmand, the lone anglophone minister from that province, "had neither the time nor the inclination to speak openly on behalf of the disenchanted non-francophones in Quebec."

He said the lack of a strong anglophone minister from Quebec "is unjustifiable in a time of national crisis, in that it indicates a disregard for the non-francophones of Quebec, who are being ousted from their jobs, their schools and their homes by persons whose motivating force is power and greed and who are propelled by an inferiority complex."

Herbert was referring to the controversial legislation that made Quebec officially French. The law controls access to the English and French school systems and seeks to gradually make French the working language of the province.

A spokesman for Trudeau said there would be no immediate reaction. 'It's too soon to comment on that broad a range of criticism," he said.

PROVINCIAL COURT

Judge Fred Green had a 38-year-old man removed from Victoria provincial court Wednesday when he refused to stop talking.

Roger Lindal was charged by Saanich police with unlawful confinement in connection with last weekend's hostage-taking incident at Wilkinson Road jail, and was to have had the charge formally read to him Wednesday afternoon in court.

However, Lindal didn't allow proceedings to begin. He declared that he was not able to make contact with crown prosecutors or Saanich police in an attempt have attempted murder charges laid against two Wilkinson Road guards as a result of an incident at the institution 3½ years ago.

Green asked Lindal to listen and, when the accused man refused, warned him that he would be removed from court if he persisted.

"Wouldn't bother me," Lindal replied.

Green then remanded Lindal until this morning, when he is expected to be charged with holding guard Allan McNeil during a seven-hour drama which began Sunday night.

Lindal and three others were charged with a Sept. 1 armed robbery of the James Bay Inn, 270 Government, and were waiting for a preliminary hearing to begin on that charge.

McDonald was declared mentally unfit to stand trial after a psychiatric examination, but was brought back to court Sept. 2 and declared fit to stand trial.

Chris Considine, appearing for defence counsel Gordon Macdonald, elected trial by magistrate alone, entered a plea of not guilty and agreed to an Oct. 19 trial date proposed by crown counsel Robert Mulligan.

Mulligan told the court the trial should not take long, with only two psychiatrists and possibly the accused man testifying.

A pre-sentence report was ordered for a 25-year-old man on welfare who wrote cheques totalling $2,178.89 after opening a bank account with $2.

Larry Thompson, 1322 Blanshard, pleaded guilty to one count of false pretences and two counts of attempted false pretences and will be sentenced Sept. 28.

Court was told Thompson opened an account at a branch of the Toronto-Dominion bank with $2 and asked for 12 blank cheques, which he said was for post-dated cheques to his landlord.

The same day, he wrote a cheque for $727.47 to Kelly's Stereo Mart, 728 Yates, for a television set and remote-control unit.

Mulligan also said Thompson attempted to buy a television set and stand at Zellers on Hillside with a $813.03 cheque, and stereo equipment and headphones from the Port of Sound with a $638.39 cheque.

A 17-year-old girl who was released from court Tuesday reappeared Wednesday charged with robbery with threats of violence.

Christine Laurel Foster, no fixed address, was remanded in custody this time in connection with a Tuesday incident which took place after she was released Tuesday on her own recognizance. She was remanded until Friday for election of her trial method.

She was charged Tuesday with theft of an automobile and possession of stolen property after being arrested in the Town and Country shopping centre at 3:10 a.m. Monday by Saanich police.

Two men charged with car theft and possession of stolen property were remanded in custody until Friday for election and bail hearing.

Stephen Joseph Sawchuk, 20, and Fabian Burkman McPhee, 24, both of no fixed address, were jointly charged with the offences, which were alleged to have taken place Tuesday. In addition, McPhee was also charged with impaired driving, driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08, and leaving the scene of an accident.

Douglas Barry Anderson, 24, pleaded guilty to driving while suspended and court was told that Colwood RCMP, on a routine patrol at 3:50 a.m. May 15, stopped Anderson's vehicle and noticed that the driver and passenger in the front seat exchanged positions. Anderson later admitted that he was the driver at the time the vehicle was stopped by police.

Mulligan said Anderson had been fined $250 on Nov. 13, 1974, in Burnaby for having a blood-alcohol content over .08, and $600 on Jan. 17, 1977, in Nanaimo for impaired driving. His suspension was effective Jan. 17 and was to last until July 17, Mulligan said.

I won't sue Rankin, says Mair

Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair, who said Tuesday he had consulted a lawyer as the result of a statement made about him by Vancouver alderman Harry Rankin, announced Wednesday that he had decided not to take legal action.

In a prepared statement, Mair said he didn't want Rankin's money and that any apology he offered would be "worthless."

Rankin was reported to have said in a speech Sunday that Mair, while a Kamloops alderman, had wanted to move Indians from a reserve because of the land's development potential.

Tory backs non-smoker legislation

Non-smokers in B.C. would be able to obtain low-cost insurance under legislation introduced Wednesday in the Legislature by Conservative leader Scott Wallace.

Wallace said in an interview that the Non-smokers' Preferred Risk Insurance Rates Act would guarantee that persons who refrain from smoking, and buildings where smoking is not allowed, could have the lower rates from insurance companies.

He said the ultimate aim of the bill was, however, to encourage people not to smoke.

Wallace, a medical doctor, said he has never smoked.

No Teamster hearing—Williams

The government's probe into the Teamsters Union controversy will be confined to the union's rules and bylaws and will not be in the form of a public hearing, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Wednesday.

Williams said that somehow the impression had been conveyed that there would be a wide-ranging hearing.

He conceded that the union's Canadian leader Senator Ed Lawson, had been concerned about the extent of authority given industrial relations officer Colin Kay after reading of Kay's appointment earlier this week.

Williams clarified the matter for Lawson.

Involved is the struggle within the Teamsters' big Local 213 in Vancouver — a dispute that developed into a short-lived strike as a means of prompting the labor ministry to take action.

Most of the fireworks came after secretary-treasurer Jack Vlahovic was tried in closed session by the international union. Found guilty of contravening the union's international constitution, he was fined close to $11,000, ordered to give up his post immediately and barred from office for life.

The verdict came last Friday, but Vlahovic has managed to maintain control of his office at the Vancouver headquarters on East Broadway.

He became secretary-treasurer after running against and defeating incumbent Al Medley, who was supported by Lawson. Lawson, in addition to being Canadian leader, is provincial joint council president and an international vice-president. His majority on the Local 213 executive laid the charges against Vlahovic for what was claimed to be "unauthorized spending." There were other complaints as well.

Vlahovic says he has obtained a lawyer to represent him during the government inquiry.

In clarifying the ground rules for the inquiry, Williams said it would be "limited to the rules and bylaws of the union and steps which have been taken under them."

Herring boats face new test

New small fishing vessels engaged in the herring and capelin fishery off B.C.'s coast will be required to under go stability tests under amendments to the Small Fishing Vessel Inspection Regulations.

The amendment was one of the recommendations in an inquiry report following the loss of 16 vessels during the 1975 herring roe season.

The inquiry asked that all new fishing vessels over 15 tons engaged in the fishery have their stability characteristics approved in a manner similar to that required for large fishing vessels.

Every vessel covered under the regulations will have to undergo an inclining experiment in the presence of a steamship inspector.

The tests will indicate the stability of the vessel in various conditions of loading including, where applicable, "iced up" conditions.

The new law covers all new vessels and existing vessels modified for herring or capelin fishing.

The criteria assessing the adequacy of a vessel's stability complies with internationally recognized recommendations and is the same as that now applied to large fishing vessels.

'Paper' taken out of news

Colonist-Monitor Services

BOSTON, Massachusetts — Entrenched in the living room easy chair, eyes glued to the television screen, a viewer presses the elegant touch-tone selector at his side. Instantly the game show he'd been watching blacks out and 24 rows of "newspaper" print flash on. He glances through the table if contents — foreign news, stock market prices, recipes, travel reports — and then dials 104 for the updated consumer news.

LAST NOVEMBER the British government authorized transmission of printed news and information to the general public over television screens, a process known as teletext. This revolution in journalism allows the viewer to dial out of his ordinary channels and into screen-size news pages at whatever time and in whatever sequence he desires, using a special teletext decoder.

The two British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) channels now offer a 100-page news service called CEEFAX. Britain's Independent Broadcasting Authority offers a similar service known as Oracle. The services can be viewed only on TV sets equipped with decoders.

FOR THE PAST two years of experimentation, a select group, including Queen Elizabeth and several political figures and corporation heads, has owned teletext decoders. But this year most major British television receiver manufacturers have committed themselves to decoder production. BBC engineers expect that more than 50,000 sets will be equipped to receive CEEFAX service by late this year.

What will be the impact of this system on TV and newspaper journalism? The production director of Scripps-Howard newspapers has called CEEFAX" one of our biggest competitive fears within a few years." Other newspapers that view teletext as a possible supplement to their operations are getting in on the ground floor of the new technology.

..THERE ARE no deadlines. Information can be constantly updated. Unlike newspaper publication, only seconds elapse after the news is typed until it reaches the public.

CEEFAX index of news pages and the number to dial for selection

TV 'newspaper' enables viewers to dial out ordinary channels into screen-sized news pages

John Ahlhauser, a teletext authority at Indiana University's School of Journalism, says that teletext could "deliver all the latest news, volumes of consumer information, countless classified ads, without the delivery problems caused by paper shortages and prices, oil shortages and prices, and carrier-person shortages."

The dean of communications and journalism at the University of Florida sees teletext as inevitable.

"The reporter is the one person who's safe. You cut out all the other steps from the composing room to the paper boy," says the dean, Dr. Ralph Lowenstein.

With the spiraling cost of paper and fuel, the BBC conceives of CEEFAX as eventually much more economical than newspapers. Installation of the entire system, which basically consists of a minicomputer and four editors, costs only $200,000.

BUT THERE are others who see the future role of teletext as purely supplemental. John Ball, director of engineering for Public Broadcasting Service (PBS), says, "I couldn't for the life of me see this precluding the sale of newspapers. It will never replace sitting where you want, in a car or a plane or your own bed."

A spokesman for Texas Instruments, the company that developed the first decoders for CEEFAX, thinks American acceptance of the system will be slow. Unlike Great Britain, most programming in America is funded by commercials. He considers it doubtful that sponsors would support a network on which they had to compete with news bulletins during their commercials.

Another obstacle is lack of space. One screenful of CEEFAX equals only about 150 words. It is not easy to broadcast any story in depth. This fact concerns some who feel selective viewing could promote "tunnel vision." They feel a society that depends on short headlines or only reads sports scores without having to flip through the rest of the paper could become increasingly specialized and less well informed.

AT HEADQUARTERS the BBC computer Esmeralda spews forth gardening tips, shopping bargains, and the latest headlines for 16 hours every day. Esmeralda's activities are monitored by a small team of BBC newsmen. They consolidate and edit the information gathered from the network of BBC-TV and radio newsrooms around the world. The "pages" are then transmitted as a series of electronic impulses — known as data signals — with the regular TV picture.

There are three types of teletext pages:

Type A — news headlines and other single pages of information that can be rapidly updated;

Type B — rotating pages of longer information where a full page remains for a reading period; a news text continuing the story then takes its place;

Type C — information that needs little updating and might be transmitted only once a day, such as feature pieces or the Top-20 record list. The viewer preselects this page number so that his receiver will recognize it and store it until he can read it at a convenient time.

A FOURTH OPTION is available for superimposing subtitles on normal programs. The viewer can choose to have news flashes subtitled on his regular program as important events occur.

Britain leads the world in offering selective viewing. But the CEEFAX newsroom has been visited by representatives of more than 70 countries, and the United States may not be far behind.

In New York, the British-owned news agency Reuter already has financial news-on-demand available to cable-TV customers. A Reuter general news service is expected to begin on cable within the year. Reuter's teletex system (called IDR) uses a broadband cable channel and high-speed transmission (70,000 words a second) to offer thousands of pages to New Yorkers and pay cable customers anywhere.

AS FOR THE legality of an American national teletext system, a recent decision by the Federal Communications System may have paved the way.

In a series of FFC hearings spearheaded by PBS, 1½ lines of data signals have been reserved for captioning for the 14 million hearing-impaired in the U.S.

The captions can be seen only on sets equipped with decoders. The ruling also states the FCC will be receptive to suggestions of other ways this closed caption area can be used.

But although the FCC ruling took effect March 1, PBS's Ball doubts decoders will be on the market until late next year.

THE PRICE TAG estimated by Texas Instruments and the BBC for the viewer is about $200 for attachments. It is hoped this will be $100 less when the decoder is built right into the set.

The technology for teletext is here. The economics is not. Those who have the money in American television, namely, commercial network sponsors, are wary of an automatic "tune-out" system.

"After all," one PBS engineer asked, "what do you think is the most logical time for a viewer to tune out and check the sports scores?"

In the words of another observer, "it will never replace newspapers. People need something to hold in their hands and wrap the fish in."

Making the world turn difficult for southpaw

MONTREAL (CP) — For a left-handed person, most of the world does not go his way.

Doorknobs turn the wrong way, books open from the wrong direction, widing a watch or a fishing reel is a feat for a contortionist and scissors are impossible.

Throughout history lefties have had troubles. Being a left-handed dueler in ancient Rome posed serious problems, because shields were held in the left hand to protect the heart and swords were carried in the right.

Nobody knows why some people are left-handed and current theory holds several contradictory notions. Scientists do know that the right side of the body is controlled by the left side of the brain and vice versa. One explanation is that the speech centre is in the left hemisphere of the brain in most people so when speech is formed into writing, the right hand is the favored instrument.

In the other 70 per cent it isn't clear whether speech is on the left side of the brain and the area controlling the hand on the right, or if the hand is controlled ipsolaterally — from the same side.

But Corballis said left-handed people are lately being referred to as right-hemisphere people because of the cross-wiring system. Right-handed people were once considered superior and clever, he said, but the right hemisphere is better at doing a remarkable number of things.

Fame swells Sills' sound

By ANDREA HERMAN
Colonist-Copley News Service

It's the most frustrating experience a reporter can have — being there, in the presence of this exquisitely quotable woman, Beverly Sills, and being unable to get it all down.

As any member of the press who interviewed her will testify, Ms. Sills talks "with you," not "to you." She gets a kick from interacting. Expects you do, too.

You land on your feet later with whay you remember.

What you remember is a vibrant, rather tall, ample woman dolled up a rust ultrasuede, lots of red wavy hair, big diamond rings and an energetic voice that resounds with confidence.

"I'VE DONE all that I set out to do.

"Now I'm pulling back from commitments, not adding more. I no longer have to sing every half hour. I'm not a wind-up doll. I don't need the money and my career certainly won't suffer from it."

You remember the famous names dropped. Sutherland. Milnes. Menotti. Gedda. Rudel. Dame Baker. The late Treigle. Talks about future plans. ("I intend to do three world premieres. That's where the challenge is for me now.") And inside gossip. ("Pavorotti called me from Bologna to tell me he was pulling out of that disastrous production.")

And you remember an honesty.

"IT'S TIME that we took pride in our artists. We've got to get over this attitude that because it's European, it's better.

"It's not!"

The 47-year-old diva (nicknamed Bubbles) picks and chooses her roles. Stage directors mount productions custom-designed for her. She has her own TV talk show that may be syndicated, contracts with major opera houses that go through 1980, and the power to wield artistic innovations, chew out operatic bureaucrats and turn the tables on the status quo.

SHE REALIZES standards in the operatic world are not likely to improve unless she zealously works at them. So she drills it in, over and over.

"I'm a loud mouth about promoting talent — American talent," she said. "We must think of artists as our national heritage. We must support them." And she does, through her years with the National Endowment for the Arts.

"I have to think of a life of my own now.

"GOD WILLING my voice will hold out three or four more years. If it doesn't, that's a fact of life.

"So I will husband my voice these next years. It has served me well, now it should be well taken care of."

You have only to see her sit there, enthusiastic and earnest as she rambles on about future roles, or hear her describe dramatic stage appeal in finite terms, or see the joy and sweetness in her eyes when she reflects on the old days and old names — to know how much Beverly Sills cherishes her art.

Saanich Inlet salmon derby starts at dawn

Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association will hold its annual open Spring-Coho Derby in the inlet from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Only VSIAA members will be able to compete for the two major trophies — heaviest chinook and the heaviest coho. But all anglers will be able to compete for the cash prizes — $25, $15 and $10 in each category, plus other hidden weight prizes.

Riders ending season in first-class style

By MARILYN McCALL

Victoria's 1977 horse show season, nearly at an end, is finishing in grand style with six different events taking place over the past weekend.

A newly-formed horse group, known as the Metchosin Horse People, held their first club event — a cross country competition. Awards were presented in each of three categories. Debbie Wilson, riding Bakib, was first in the junior division, with Tracey Macivity on Tralee taking second. Third went to Noelle Hind and Toby, and Debbie James, riding Saffron, was fourth.

The intermediate division was won by both Karen and Sara Hopper, riding Classy Boy and Shane to a tie. Tammy Matthews and Paton were second. Third was won by Linda Hill on Beauty and Charles Turner and April were fourth. Joe Percival, riding Wahluna, won the senior division. Second went to Sherri Epp on Taco and Anne Horgan on Max was third. Fourth was won by Annie Percival on Kwatee.

ROBERT CAMPBELL, of Victoria, judged the Luxton Fall Fair open horse show. Heather Rimmer and Dun's Mischief won both the high point light horse exhibitor award and the senior aggregate, taking first in senior trail, open western riding horse, open reining, open stock horse and senior keyhole race. Riding Teddy Lee One, Heather was also first in senior western pleasure, western pleasure for registered horses and western pleasure stake. Dale Rimmer and Sunny June were the junior aggregate winners, winning the open baton relay race, along with Bob Plank on Zorro and Con Patrick on Too High.

ROBBIE CAMPBELL and Lady's First were first in junior trail, junior flags and junior stakes. Roddy Rimmer, riding Alli Kat, was first in senior flags and senior barrels. Riding April Love, Charles Turner won novice western pleasure and junior balloon popping. Junior western equitation was won by Roddy Rimmer on Twisty Winkle.

In junior western pleasure, Brian Rimmer and Dun's Mischief were first. Elaine Cummings rode Flash to first in the junior apple race. The junior keyhole race was won by John Turner on Star and the junior pole bending was won by Corinne Smith on Steledo. Cindy Heslop and Apache won senior pole bending. Riding Georgy Girl, Lynn McKinney won the junior barrel race.

TOM SAMPSON, of Lantzville, judged the Saanich 4-H Horse Club's Achievement Day at Saanichton. At this final club show of the year, the members accumulate points from the unit classes of showmanship at halter and equitation, pleasure classes — English and western, a trail class, and also members must judge a class of four saddle horses.

Heidi Bell, riding Gwen Bar Honey won the senior aggregate, with reserve going to Marion Taylor on Island Magic (better known as Flicka). The junior aggregate was won by Dana Sorenson on Prince. Reserve was won by Caroline Chianti.

The Vancouver Island Appaloosa Horse Club's open horse show was judged by Pam Lenko of Duncan. Held at Saanichton, the show featured both English and western events.

THE HIGH point English riders were as follows: Jenny Pipes on Stardust (13 and under), who won green road hack; Susan Stanlick, riding Taurus (14-17), who won English equitation; and Debbie Futter who rode Nicholas Nickleby to first in road hack, show hack, English pleasure — hunter type, working hunter under saddle and hunter hack to win the 18 and over division.

Dana Sorenson was high point western rider (13 and under), winning western riding horse on Starlight; Karen Telford and Golden Tears were high point 14-17, winning western equitation and reining (17 and under), and Barb den Boer won the 18 and over high point, riding Polly-L-Lysine to first in reining and western pleasure.

ENGLISH equitation (13 and under) was won by Glyniss Boggs on Red Wings. English pleasure saddle type was won by June Simle on Casino Royale. In maiden show hack, Joanne Brice and Caseem were first. The horsemen to be class was divided into a western and an English section: Roberta Specht, riding Kate, won the western and Diane Jones on Mojo won the English. Anna-Lise McLean, on Wanna Toke, won trail (13 and under); Jill Dyson on Mojo won trail (14-17); and Lori Taylor on Wanna Toke won trail (18 and over). IN GREEN western pleasure, Jill Yates and Stardust were first. Kaya Brix, on Ashley's Poco Dot, was first in western equitation (13 and under). Open western riding horse was won by Marianne Bradasch and Blizzard.

The Sooke Saddle Club held a competition trail ride, with prizes being awarded in two divisions. Joan Cringan and Grouchy Abe won tht senior divisions. Joan Cringan and Grouchy Abe won the senior division. There was a tie for second between Con Patrick on Too High and Christine White on Breezy Kit. Freda Wright and Seda were third and fourth went to Eleanor Burton on Decka's Dolly Dee. Wendy Dun was fifth. DALE RIMMER was first in the junior division, on Sunny June. Second went to Tammy Yendall on Simon. In third place, there was a tie between Paul Tregear on Goldi and Jamie Evans on Pepper. Andrea Goyette, riding Toby was fourth, and Julie Ruttan, on Wordale's Keepit, and Susie Wright on Prince tied for fifth. Final awards for the year's competitions were presented after the trail ride. Andrea Goyette and Toby won the aggregate trail trophy. The total performance trophy went to Julie Ruttan.

Oak Meadows was the scene of an English and western show on Sunday. English events were judged by Dana Wilfert of Vancouver and western events were judged by Cindy Heslop of Victoria. HEATHER RIMMER, riding Dun's Mischief, won the western aggregate, winning stock horse, reining, western riding and trail. Merle Rimmer, on Clabbedy Kampe, was first in basic seat 12 and under. Judy Ross rode Peeping Tom to first in working hunter 2'6". The open working hunter class was won by Karen Rougier on Centennial Sukmer.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a woman finds lumps in her breast, what are the chances of her needing a mastectomy? — Mrs. W.W.

Recent statistics I've heard indicate that for every 14 lump detections one mastectomy is necessary.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have started the menopause. How long should it be before I can feel free of the danger of becoming pregnant? — Mrs. L.H.C.

The possibility of pregnancy can be discounted after a woman has ceased menstruation for one year. It could be less time than that, of course, but a year is a safe time span to use. By the time a woman approaches menopause, the likelihood of pregnancy diminishes, then gradually reaches the impossibility stage.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Explain, please what a hematoma is and what should be done about it? — D. L.

It's an extensive bleeding under the skin. It can be from injury or from such things as the rigors of childbirth (often in the groin area). They are not usually serious and can be drained surgically if the blood is not absorbed naturally into the body tissue.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has high blood pressure which is being controlled by medication. He is supposed to restrict salt intake. Now that coffee prices are up he wants to drink bouillon cube soup instead. I say that there is a high salt content in it. Would four cups a day be too much? — Mrs. G. M.

I would stay away from bouillon soup. It does contain salt. Check your label for salt or for the word somium. Tea might be a better substitute.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What do you recommend for athlete's feet? I seem to be bothered with it more in the summer time than in winter. — G.E.

The drugstore remedies (medicated powders) are usually effective in curing athlete's foot, which is a fungus problem. But you must continue use of such powders for some time after the symptoms disappear. I emphasize this because so many sufferers use the products for only a few days, then have a recurrence.

Some people have the problem more in the winter than in summer, when lighter socks and shoes allow better ventilation of the feet. Moisture, as from perspiration, is an invitation to the fungus. But many people get into summertime activities that promote fungus growth, such as using bathing houses at beaches. They should wear sandals in such areas.

I never heard of a case that could not be controlled with sensible treatment. Left untreated, however, serious and even incapacitating conditions can develop.

Epidemic slackening

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — Syria, Jordan and Lebanon Tuesday reported a slackening of a cholera epidemic that has killed more than 70 persons and stricken more than 3,500 others in the Arab world since late last month.

Syria, where more than 3,100 cases and all of the deaths, reported 43 new cases and no further cholera fatalities. Syrian officials had reported some 100 new cases Monday.

Volvo men back on job

HALIFAX (CP) — All 125 employees of the Volvo Canada Ltd. automobile assembly plant here were back on the job Tuesday after a seven-week layoff.

Thirty-three of the workers were recalled last week to begin preparations for the 1978 model year and the rest returned Monday and Tuesday, plant manager Gunnar Jennegren said. The layoffs came because production of 1977 vehicles ended sooner than had been anticipated, he said.

Tris labels: They're still dangerously puzzling

By M. SULLIVAN
Colonist-Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — You cannot easily tell by reading labels of your children's nightclothes whether they contain Tris, the flame-retardant chemical found to cause cancer in mice and rats and possibly in humans.

Since 1972, when the flame-retardant standard went into effect, until April 8, 1977, when a ban was put on the sale of Tris in children's sleepwear, the chemical was used in several fibers in order to meet the government-required flammability code.

But if you look at the labels of your children's sleepwear, sizes 0-14, you can follow this guideline:

- Acetates and triacetates — and fibers with blends of either — made before April 8, 1977, always were treated with Tris.
- Some 100 per cent polyester was treated with Tris, but not all. The Consumer Product Safety Commission, which imposed the Tris ban, says "there is no certain way" to distinguish between those treated or not treated with Tris.
- The following man-made fibers used in sleepwear are inherently flame-resistant and thus do not require addition of any chemical to meet flammability codes: modacrylic and blends, its brand names are Verel, Sef and Kanecaron. Matric and blends, its brand name is Cordelan. Vinyon and blends, its brand name is Leavil.

Nylon and 100 per cent cotton "characteristically," the CPSC says, have required the addition of a chemical other than Tris to achieve flame-resistance.

In putting out its original Tris ban in April, the CPSC told consumers that three washings of a Tris-treated garment should "virtually eliminate" Tris in sleepwear that is available for absorption through the skin or by "mouthing."

But in a later statement, it said "scientific evidence suggests that the amount of Tris removed by washing varies greatly according to the type of fabric involved and the amount of surface Tris originally on the garment."

This statement, on Aug. 11, came as the result of an out-of-court settlement of a case brought against CFSC by the Environmental Defence Fund. The group originally had sued in an attempt to force CPSC to ban already washed Tris-treated garments from the market.

As part of the agreement, EDF said it would drop its suit if CPSC would issue a statement warning of the hazards involved in garments that have been washed.

The CPSC, in essence, said consumers would have to make up their own minds about further use of washed Tris-treated children's sleepwear.

In a separate statement, the EDF said:

"The available evidence shows that even after repeated washings, enough surface Tris remains in some garments to produce a skin reaction in certain people.

"The presence of a skin reaction indicates that Tris is still entering the body from washed garments and is thus still a cancer threat."

"What we are saying, in essence," said an EDF spokesperson, "is this: 'Don't use the garments'."

Toni Griffin judges hundreds of breads at fair

Homemade bread rises in favor

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Colonist-Copley News Service

Nothing gives a homey atmosphere to a house any quicker than the smell of yeast breads baking.

Epicures extoll the virtues of natural ingredients, and persons interested in increasing fibre in food have discovered homemade bread is the most palatable way to achieve it.

Check the label on any bread you buy at a store. If one of the ingredients reads "non-nutritive fibre," it means the bread contains cellulose, an inert substance derived from wood. Cellulose, first cousin to sawdust, is in that bread.

BASIC WHEAT BREAD

- 2 cups enriched flour
- 2 pkgs. dry yeast
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup water
- ¼ cup oil
- ¼ cup honey
- 1 tbsp. salt
- 1 egg at room temperature
- 4 to 4½ cups whole wheat flour.

Stir together 2 cups flour and yeast. Heat milk, water, oil, honey and salt over low heat until warm (125 to 130 degrees). Add liquid ingredients to flour-yeast mixture and beat until smooth, about three minutes on medium speed of electric mixer or 300 strokes by hand. Beat in egg. Stir in whole wheat flour to make a moderately stiff dough. Turn onto lightly floured surface, cover with bowl and let rest 10 minutes. Knead until smooth and satiny, about 5 to 10 minutes. Cover and let rest 20 minutes.

To shape loaves, divide dough in half. Roll each half into a 7x14-inch rectangle. Roll up from narrow side, pressing roll into dough at each turn. Press ends to seal and fold under loaf. Place in two greased loaf pans, 4½x8½ inches; brush with oil. Let rise in warm place until doubled, about 60 to 75 minutes. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven for 35 to 45 minutes; cover tops with foil to prevent excess browning. Remove immediately from pans and brush with melted butter or oil.

Here's an egg-rich sweet bread:

SALLY LUNN

- 3½ to 4 cups unsifted flour
- ⅓ cup sugar
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 pkg. active dry yeast
- ½ cup milk
- ½ cup water
- ½ cup margarine (1 stick)
- 3 eggs at room temperature

In a large bowl thoroughly mix 1¼ cups flour, sugar, salt and undissolved active dry yeast.

Combine milk, water and margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm, 120 to 130 degrees. Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat two minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add eggs and 1 cup flour, or enough flour to make a thick batter. Beat at high speed two minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a stiff batter. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about one hour.

Stir batter down and beat well, about one-half minute. Turn into a well-greased and floured nine-inch tube pan. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about one hour.

Bake at 350 degrees, about 45 to 50 minutes, or until done. Remove from pan and cool on wire rack. Best when served warm.

There's a funny story about the origin of Anadama bread. It is said that a Gloucester fisherman had a lazy wife, Anna, who refused to bake bread. In exasperation he mixed up a concoction of his own, and, as he stirred and kneaded, his family heard him muttering, "Anna damn her."

ANADAMA BREAD

- 7 to 8 cups unsifted flour
- 1¼ cups yellow cornmeal
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 2 pkgs. active dry yeast
- ⅓ cup softened margarine
- 2¼ cups very warm tap water
- ⅔ cup molasses at room temperature

In a large bowl thoroughly mix 2½ cups flour, cornmeal, salt and undissolved active dry yeast. Add margarine.

Gradually add tap water and molasses to dry ingredients and beat two minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add ½ cup flour. Beat at high speed two minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about eight to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about one hour.

Punch dough down; divide in half. Roll each half to a 14x9-inch rectangle. Shape into loaves. Place in 2 greased loaf pans, 9x5x3 inches. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 45 minutes.

Bake at 375 degrees for about 45 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks. Makes 2 loaves.

Chiropractor warns of dancing dangers

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto chiropracter says hundreds of children entering ballet schools this fall will suffer serious, permanent injuries caused by incompetent teachers.

David Drum said in an interview that youngsters who receive improper instruction might suffer warped spines, deformed feet, inflamed joints which could become arthritic and a variety of tendon, ligament and cartilage injuries.

Drum said that in the last five years, he has treated 800 young persons who have suffered injuries resulting from improper ballet training.

"The classical teaching of ballet is so potent for straightening spines, legs and feet that it's just as powerful for destroying," Drum said.

Jacque Foesier, director of dance programs at branches of the YMCA and YWCA, said at least a dozen of the 450 students he sees each year have severe injuries or conditions which require corrective exercises or a doctor's care.

Foesier said he spotted serious back or foot conditions caused by poor training in five of 12 students during auditions.

Foesier and Betty Oliphant, director and principal of the National Ballet School, said they blame the poor teaching on private ballet studies which sacrifice quality for economics and which do not bother to hire qualified teachers.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a Prayer for Parents. I thought it was beautiful. And now I have composed a prayer for children. I hope you will give it equal time. —Young and Wishing

God in heaven, I am young and don't understand what it is like to be a parent, but it must be very hard because so many people are failing at it these days.

I pray for Mom and Dad, God, that You will help them to be good parents — strong in the ways you want them to be, so I can look up to them with admiration and feel confident that their instruction is right.

Help me, dear Lord, to understand my parents. Remind me that when I don't get my way it is because they love me and not because they want to be mean or deprive me of anything.

Help me, God, when I become stubborn and refuse to listen, to accept the fact that they have wisdom and experience because they were once teen-agers but I have never been a parent.

Put in my heart the respect and consideration they deserve for their years of hard work and sacrifice. They raised me the best way they knew how. Let me now repay them without grief or shame. Rather help me to give them obedience, respect, forgiveness and love. Most of all, God, while I still have them here on earth, help me to appreciate my parents.

Dear Young and Wishing: You may be young but you are wise beyond your years. Thanks so much for sharing.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are invited often to eat dinner at his brother's house. His wife is a nice person and we all get along fine. But she is a terrible housekeeper and to make matters worse, they have a couple of huge cats that have the run of the place.

A few weeks ago my sister-in-law put a can of cat food on the kitchen cabinet — next to the meal she had prepared for us. The big Tom jumped on on the cabinet, walked over the dinner rolls and swished his tail through the meatballs and cabbage. My husband and I both saw this and we lost our appetities completely.

Since that incident, my husband refuses to eat at their house and I am running out of excuses. He says I can't tell them the real season because it would only start trouble. Any suggestions, Ann? — Crossfire In Nameless City

Dear Fire: Just say your husband has developed a preference for eating at home (which is no lie) and while you aren't crazy about the idea there's nothing you can do but comply with his request.

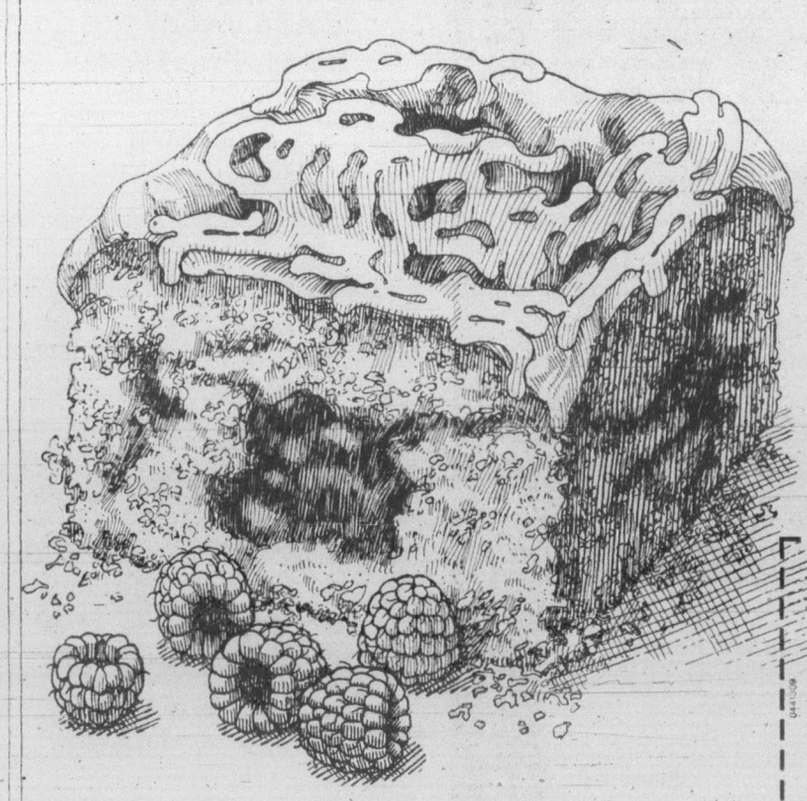
How the raspberries got into new Sara Lee Raspberry Danish Rolls.



One day, not very long ago, a bunch of us at Sara Lee were sitting around during our coffee break, enjoying Sara Lee Apple Crunch and Raisin Cinnamon Danish Rolls, Pecan Coffee Cake and Apple Danish.

Suddenly, someone asked why we don't put raspberries into Sara Lee Danish, too.

Frankly, none of us could think of a reason why we shouldn't.

So that very day, we added the taste of real raspberries to all the other wonderful ingredients that make Sara Lee Danish such delicious treats.

When they were fully baked, we had the best raspberry Danish rolls we had ever tasted.

We know you'll enjoy them as much as you've enjoyed our little story. Or even more.

To thank you for reading our little story, here's 18 cents off your first purchase of new Sara Lee Raspberry Danish Rolls. Or Sara Lee Apple Crunch or Raisin Cinnamon Danish Rolls. Or Pecan Coffee Cake. Or Apple Danish.

'Impossible' to work in U.K.

Actor Caine joining tax exiles

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Reuter) — British film actor Michael Caine told a news conference Tuesday he had decided to join the ranks of tax exiles moving out of Britain.

Caine, 44, born in a London slum to a fishmarket porter and a charwoman, said he had held out for seven years against leaving the country because of high taxes.

But he said the British taxation system had driven so many international film people out of Britain it was impossible for him to find work there.

"I sat around for seven months for a film called Philby to be made in Britain and nothing happened," he said. "I came here to do one picture and I have got three, which means I am working until next August.

"The international arm of the movie industry has been destroyed in England and I will eventually move elsewhere to take advantage of the work I am trained to do."

Caine said he had not yet decided where he would live. But he said of Hollywood: "This is the place that's most likely because it's where work is for me. I have possibly more friends here, what with the influx of British people over the past few years."

"It's been an agonizing decision for me," said Caine, who now is working on a disaster epic called Swarm about an invasion of killer bees. "I'm giving up the greatest part of my life in order to make some kind of financial future for my family and myself."

Caine said he had always felt sorry for other tax exiles in the past. "I felt sorry for them not being able to live in England, because that's my greatest pleasure."

The actor said he had gradually come to realize that he was going to have to go abroad to earn money, then bring the money back to pay it in taxes to the British government which had ruined his industry in the first place.

"Which struck me as not only unfair to the people I work for but as being extremely stupid to myself," he said.

Tijuana city hall in dark

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Federal government electric power officials turned off the lights in City Hall on Tuesday because the city has not paid its power bill for four months.

"It came as a surprise," said Luis Carlos Ibarra, an aide to the mayor. "We expect them to turn out the street lights and traffic lights first."

Mayor Fernando Marquez Arce and other officials in this city of 700,000 across the border from San Diego were working by candlelight, Ibarra said.

The unpaid power bill amounted to the equivalent of $90,000 in U.S. currency. The Commission of Gas and Electric Tariffs in Mexico City decided last November to stop subsidizing municipal rates. Marquez Arc said rates jumped about 500 per cent by February to $35,000 monthly.

Hotel holdup suspect descriptions at odds

A holdup victim agreed in county court Wednesday that she described the man who held her up as a white male with fair complexion, while the man accused of the crime is a native Indian.

Wendy Joan Carlson, a clerk at the Imperial Inn when it was robbed March 8, was being cross-examined in the first day of the jury trial of Edward King Krobel, 30.

She agreed with defence counsel Douglas Christie that she cannot be sure who it was who robbed her that day.

Miss Carlson said a .22-calibre rifle "looks familiar" when shown a gun, which has a sawed-off barrel and sawed-off butt.

But she agreed she had told police she had said it was a shotgun with a bigger opening than a service revolver.

"I'm not familiar with guns," she said.

Presented with testimony from the preliminary hearing indicating she said the gun had a scope on it, she said she was "confused" and thought Christie was saying a scope and a sight were the same.

She said the man who robbed her came into the lobby, pulled a toque over his head and produced a gun.

Asked how she could say he had fair complexion, she said "just from seeing his chin."

She said she "mistakenly" told the preliminary hearing the robber wore an orange sweater. She said she was nervous and meant to say the color was yellow.

David James Fleming, who worked for a photo laboratory near the Imperial Inn, said he saw a car parked across the street and noted the licence number.

He said one man in dark clothing with light-coloured hair got into the passenger side and moved over to the driver's side.

A second man with a toque and "carrying what I thouught was a stick" also got into the passenger side. The second man appeared to be of medium complexion, about five feet eight inches and 160 pounds. The car sped off on Discovery towards Blanshard.

Fleming agreed he cannot be sure the second man was Krobel. He agreed he had identified the first man positively.

Stephanie Ozard, front office manager of the hotel, said she was called in March 8 to check cash in the till. She said the cash was $318 short.

As the trial, presided over by Judge Leslie Cashman, began it was jointly agreed by the prosecution and defence that:

- On March 8 there was a robbery.
- That Miss Carlson was robbed.
- That Oscar Napoleon Perron has been convicted as a party to that robbery.
- One other person was involved in the robbery.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

When the novice gardener first takes a crack at growing some vegetables for his family, almost invariably his eyes are bigger than his stomach and he winds up with a far bigger crop than can possibly be consumed at the moment. Some of the surplus may be frozen or canned, of course, and there is a growing hobby of making homemade wines from home-grown fruits and vegetables. One of my friends makes a fine light table wine from pea pods — after the peas are shelled — while his parsnip wine packs a kick like the proverbial mule.

But what do you do when you don't own a freezer and lack canning or wine-making equipment? Fortunately, most of our common vegetables will keep in remarkably good condition if you can store them in a very cool but frost-free place.

There are a few basic principles which must be followed if vegetables are to be stored successfully for winter use, and the first and most important of these is to store only the sound and healthy specimens. Inspect each one carefully, and any with scratches or bruises, spots or rot of slug holes should be sent to the kitchen to be eaten up first, for to put them in storage is just asking for trouble — trouble which could spread all your stored vegetables.

Another important principle is to store only the mature vegetables. All of us are fond of tender young vegetables — finger-length carrots, crisp green onions, tiny zucchini or scallopini squash, baby beets and baby new potatoes — but these are much too young and sappy to remain in good condition in winter storage, and will inevitably shrivel or rot.

Next to sound health and maturity, the most important factor in the storage of vegetables is temperature, which for most vegetables should ideally be as close to the freezing point as possible without actual frost.

It must be remembered that the normal growth processes lead always to either sprouting or rot, so to keep stored vegetables in an edible condition for any great length of time, these growth processes must be slowed down to a snail's pace. Grrowth slows down as the temperature drops, so it follows that the cooler the storage place — short of actual freezing — the longer will be the storage life of your vegetables.

A temperature range between two and six degrees isnt' too difficult to maintain in a farm dugout or an old-fashioned root cellar, but it isn't easy to find a suitable place in a modern furnace-heated home. A 10-degree fruit cupboard in the basement is better than nothing, but storage life is correspondingly reduced.

A fourth factor is humidity, for vegetables tend to shrivel in dry air. Here again, the old root cellar and farm dugout score heavily, for the dirt floor contributes considerable moisture to the air. The very dry winter air in a furnace-heated home can be counteracted to some extent by burying such vegetsbles as carrots and beets in boxes of slightly dampened peat moss, sand or sawdust.

A fifth factor — and this is a very important one — is ventilation, for unless there is some movement of air through the storage place, it becomes stuffy and musty, leading to all kinds of queer rots and moulds and taints. The dugout and the root cellar, excellent in other respects, are often poorly ventilated.

Cleanliness and freedom from smells are essential, of course, for vegetables will pick up taints at the drop of a hat. I remember one occasion when the family overshoes were inadvertently stored in the same basement room as the vegetables, and the ghost of those rubber boots appeared at every meal!

Fruit and vegetables are not good companions in storage. That lovely fruity smell of apples, for instance, is an ethylene gas that speeds up the growth processes in vegetables, inducing potatoes to sprout and causing a bitter flavor in carrots.

Sydney Harris

A woman in Kansas wants to know how it is possible that a friend of hers — "a sweet and generous woman" — can have as another close friend a woman "who is a malicious gossip of the worst sort." She is puzzled by what her friend finds in the gossip.

What she finds, I expect, is a deeply repressed part of her own personality. Some of us do our own dirty work; others must get someone else to do it for them. For we become friends with people not only for their virtues but also for their vices.

Her example reminds me of married couples I have known, in which the husband was mild, quiet and courteous, while his wife was loud, aggressive and contentious. People observing them in action would invariably ask, "Why does he put up with it; why does he let her get away with such behavior?"

The only answer that makes sense is that he covertly enjoys such behavior. She is acting out for him some real need to attack others — a need he is unable to express directly. A large share of her initial attraction for him, no doubt, lay in his (perhaps unconscious) realization that she would be glad to do some of his dirty work for him.

The sweet and generous woman who has a malicious gossip for a confidante probably resents being so sweet and generous all the time, but lacks the temperament to be otherwise. So, with the cunning with which our infantile needs take revenge upon us, she seizes gratefully upon a friend who allows her to enjoy malice without suffering any of its consequences.

What we consider odd friendships or marriages can hardly be explained on any other basis. Each of us has actualized only a part of his full personality; the unactualized parts (which are unacceptable to us) often find their expression through the friend or mate (or gang) we choose. This is the true meaning of the maxim that opposites attract — they attract because they are not really opposites, but complementaries. They expand our possible range of reaction to the world.

It works both ways, of course. The malicious gossip is in the grip of a compulsion she cannot understand or control; and so she buys an indulgence against her sins by making friends with some who, in turn, expresses a buried part of the gossip's nature. For just as no one can be "all that sweet," no one can be all that malicious, without release.

Why should the German people have chosen Hitler? I look upon it as more than a political or econofic choice — that Europe's most orderly, most industrious, most rational, most educated, most instinctually repressed nation should have voted in the arch-demon of irrationality.

Arthur Hoppe

No one has been more "U," "in," and-or "with it" over the years than my good friend, Fred Frisbee. He is a true man for all decades. And now he can hardly wait for 1980.

I first met Fred in 1957. He was a real Fifties person. Short-haired and narrow-tied, he believed firmly in God, President Eisenhower and finding a secure niche within the system in this, the best of all possible worlds.

"Those were the days," Fred now says nostalgically. "Being a real Fifties person was as easy as falling off a log."

Then came 1960. Fred was immediately faced with the problem of transforming himself into a real Sixties person. It wasn't easy.

At first, real Sixties persons figured that, while this wasn't actually the best of all possible worlds, this, the best of all possible systems, could fix what was wrong. So Fred joined the Peace Corps and taught the natives of Mbonga how to dig latrines.

After a couple of years he felt he wasn't getting anywhere. So, along with the other real Sixties persons, he discovered this was the worst of all possible systems in this, the worst of all possible worlds.

To overthrow the system, he grew a beard, learned to shout four-letter words, blew up mail boxes, smashed the windows of mom and pop grocery stores and lay down on freeways to prevent commuters from getting home in the evenings.

Somehow the sytem survived. The real Sixties persons, understandably frustrated, had no choice but to tune in, turn on and drop out — each discovering that he or she was the best of all possible human beings, man, in this, the best of all possible communes.

Fred says that was the hardest real person he ever was. His hair was always in his eyes, he contracted chronic conjunctivitis, marijuana gave him a splitting headache and the food was terrible. He was spared from hepatitis by the advent of 1970.

As a real Seventies person, Fred quickly realized he wasn't the best of all possible human beings at all. In fact, he was a mess.

He had his hair cut so that it reached precisely to the bottom of his ear lobes, purchased a wide necktie and a puka shell necklace to wear on week ends, gladly renounced pot for white wine, and got a job so that he could afford to overthrow himself through TM, est, Rolfing, biofeedback and pre-primal-scream therapy.

Unfortunately, after more than seven years of this, he doesn't feel he's getting anywhere at all. That's why he can hardly wait for 1980.

I asked if he felt a real Eighties person would be out to save the world or save himself. "If we real persons have proven anything," he said glumly, "it's that we can't do a heck of a lot about either. But we'll go on trying to make our own little worlds better places in which to live."

And how will a real Eighties person do that? "I'm going to go home," said Fred, "kick the dog, yell at the kids and nag my wife."

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Jim Davis, who made his early fame as Bette Davis' co-star in Winter Meeting and is now one of the screen's top western actors, had a birthday party the other night.

Duke Wayne could have cast one of his pictures with some of the guests there. But there were some people who aren't cowboy actors such as David Doyle of Charlie's Angels.

Another David — Huddleson — was there also. The star of the Kallikaks may blow his whole image with liquid protein. He's lost 65 pounds so far and his agent is shopping for a remake of The Thin Man. Huddleston used to weigh 280.

Buddy Rogers, who, like Davis, comes from Olathe, Kans., says his wife Mary Pickford is unbelievably strong although she can't get around the way she did in Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.

Had a chat with Mrs. Forrest Tucker whose husband was working up in Calgary. Told me how much she and Tuck loved Hollywood is a Four-Letter Town.

"He keeps it on the coffee table and reads it aloud to everyone who comes in."

I made national folk heroes of out Tuck and Milton Berle — about 25 years too late. Marilyn said sometimes the book proves an embarrassment to her when she attends PTA meetings but that, she said, is only a minor complaint.

Georgie Jessel is writing a book called Heartbreak in Hollywood, all about the broken romances. His own will take up about five chapters. Once Milton Berle and I saw George at the bar in Hillcrest at 9 a.m., drinking his sixth martini.

Why a Ruby? Because this one bedroom suite is a real gem, south west corner exposure lets it bask in the sun all day long, where like all good gems it sparkles bright and clean. Every gem should be enhanced by a beautiful setting and this is no exception. Close to Beacon Hill, the Cathedral and downtown. Why such a bargain price? Because it's not very big. Low taxes and assessment includes heat. Call today:

CANADA
DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES AND ENVIRONMENT
Sealed tenders clearly marked "Purchase of Surplus Fish — Quinsam River Salmon Hatchery", will be received by the Director, of Field Services, 1090 West Pender Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 2P1 (Attn: D. C. Kerr) up to 4:00 P.M. Pacific Daylight Time on Tuesday, September 27, 1977.
The tenders for purchase of 100,000 lbs. of coho salmon and 10,000 lbs. of coho jacks are to be sumittted in letter form on a price-per-pound basis (round weight).
Although Fisheries Operations estimate 110,000 lbs. of salmon may be available this amount is subject to upward or downward revision and the tenderer will be responsible for the purchase of the revised number of pounds of salmon subsequently deemed available by Fisheries Operations.
The salmon will be available at Quinsam River Salmon Hatchery, Box 467, Campbell River commencing on or about October 1, 1977 and continuing thereafter for approximately 5-8 weeks. The frequency of pick-up will be regulated by the availability of salmon (daily pick-ups may be required during peak periods).
Verbal notification of pick-up dates will be given 24 hours in advance. Fish are to be processed for human consumption.
The successful tenderer will be responsible for all phases of the collecting operation at the site and the transportation of the fish to the processing plant. The tenderer must provide Government approved scales in order that the fish may be weighed and recorded at the site.
The Fisheries Operations will provide suitable equipment for collecting and sorting from the facilities but all labour must be provided by the tenderer.
The tenders must be accompanied by a money order or certified cheque payable to the Receiver General of Canada in the amount of 10% of the tender.
The deposit of the successful tenderer will be retained until satisfactory completion of the operation. Payment for fish taken is payable to the Receiver General of Canada within 10 days of the date of each pick-up of fish.
The Department reserves the right to reject any or all tenders and the highest tender will not necessarily be accepted.

309 IN MEMORIAM

Wonderful memories woven in gold
These are the memories we tenderly hold
Deep in our hearts his memory is kept
To love, to cherish and never forget.
As always loved and remembered, Mum and Dad.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE. SANDS

House of driftwood

Right frame of mind

By JACK FOSSUM
Colonist Correspondent

Duncan area may have its glass castle, but Merville district has its house of driftwood.

"It was a case of necessity," said Jim Egan when asked how he got the idea of building his 1,600-square-foot driftwood house. "We had only limited funds and it was just a case of getting the cheapest possible building material."

After selling their business on Thetis Island, Jim and his partner Jack Nesbit looked around for a place to live in retirement. They finally decided on a 3½-acre tract of land in Merville district.

"I had read about how the early settlers in the eastern United States built their homes from wood and stone cleared from their land, how they sawed the wood into blocks and placed them one upon the other to frame in their houses," said Egan.

He explained the building process, from the gathering of cedar driftwood on the beaches at Little River, cutting it into 12-inch lengths of no more than 12-inch thickness, to placing the blocks to form walls in a mosaic of wood and white mortar.

"After setting the floor on the concrete foundation, I nailed on a two-inch rough cedar lower plate, framed in the window and door openings and joined the uprights with a two-by-six upper plate," he said.

"I set the first blocks in the window area so I could frame in the windows, which I made from salvaged double-plate glass and rough cedar."

After finishing the framing, Egan sprayed the wood with a solution of used crankcase oil mixed with diesel fuel "to keep termites away and give the wood a mahogany hue."

The house, with a floor area of 1,600 square feet, has two bedrooms, a large living room with free-standing fireplace in a planting area in the centre, kitchen with dining area and Swedish fireplace, utility room and a large bathroom.

The inside walls require little or no finishing. "No insulation was required, since the foot-thick walls provide protection equal to 4½ inches of insulation," said Egan.

The house has electric heat installed, but, said Egan, "last winter, our first here, we found the two fireplaces adequate for heating the whole house."

"We began construction in May this year and moved in during October with still most of the inside finishing to be done."

Egan had seen the curved wall house design in a magazine, he said, "and we merely modified and adapted it to our own purpose."

He estimates the total cost at about $20,000, exclusive of land and labor.

Originally from Ontario, Egan and his business partner and lifelong friend Nesbit came west to establish themselves in a business they had pursued in the East — collecting and preserving marine life specimens for universities and other institutions. They settled on Thetis Island, one of the Gulf Islands.

They had a thriving business there, Egan said, until they sold out a couple of years ago. "We were not looking to getting rich, we preferred a simple life style, and when Nesbit's health began to fail we decided to find a quiet place to build our retirement home."

Unlike the people in the glass house who have commercialized its uniqueness, the two bachelors in the driftwood house like their privacy.

Bigger role seen for government

NEW YORK (AP) — Government will play a bigger role than ever in economic plans of the future, says Prof. Geoffrey Barraclough in Management Review, a publication of the American Management Associations. This will happen because the private capital market can no longer satisfy all of society's investment needs.

Filler caps to be mailed

DETROIT (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co. said Wednesday it would replace the fuel tank filler caps on 322,000 of its 1977 Granadas because of possible gasoline leakage in rear-end collisions. Ford said it would mail new gas tank caps to owners beginning next month.

Exile urges embargo

'Air you breathe belongs to Amin'

NEW YORK (UPI) — An exiled Ugandan government minister said Tuesday that President Idi Amin had turned Uganda into a black South Africa where even "the air you breathe" was owned by Amin. He said U.S. trade with Uganda propped up Amin's reign of terror.

Henry Kyemba, former Ugandan Health Minister, called for a U.S. trade embargo against Uganda and said such a step would be an "important moral boost" to forces ready to overthrow Amin.

Kyemba said the American planes Amin received in trade with the United States were used to ferry bombs and arms from the Soviet Union to his southern Sudanese "mercenaries." He said it was through American trade Amin was able to stay in power.

"There is no morality for the mercenaries," he said. "They are paid to come and take and loot from Ugandans. They traffic in the wealth of Uganda."

Kyemba said because of the southern Sudanese, whom Amin recruited to run his police force and assassination squads, "you cannot own anything" in Uganda.

"Everything, including the air you breathe, is Amin's in Uganda," he said.

"The quickest way to end this, is to insure that all trade links with Amin are cut," he said. "Once that is done, it will be an important moral boost for forces ready to remove Amin in Uganda itself."

Kyemba, who claims that Amin is responsible for at least 150,000 deaths in Uganda, has lived in London since his self-exile in May.

"The racial situation in South Africa is conspicuous because the imperial masters, the overlords, have been white," Kyemba said. "In the case of Uganda, the imperial masters are black."

Amin's imperialism had exploited the unique situation in which a black leader suppressed black people on a continent primarily concerned with ending white imperialism, he said.

The 37-year-old Ugandan, who has known Amin since he was a teen-ager and says Amin boasted to him of eating human flesh, said a change of government had to come from within Uganda.

"But it is important for the outside forces to lend their support to forces within Uganda in order to end the killings of innocent people," he said.

Asked if he intended to return to Uganda, Kyemba said: "It is my home.

"Now that I am out, I'm certain that I will outlive Amin. I assume my exile will be very temporary."

Uganda acts to ban 27 religious groups

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — Uganda banned 27 religious organizations this week, including the Salvation Army and Baptists, in a move which left scores of foreign missionaries with an uncertain future in the country.

The announcement from the internal affairs ministry, quoted by Radio Uganda, said the Salvation Army, the Seventh-day Adventist church and the Haifa-based Baha'i World Faith were included on the list.

Rev. Clement Janda of the Nairobi-based All Africa Conference of Churches said: "This is not surprising. President (Idi) Amin feels threatened by the church as a whole because it is the only organization in the country that can provide formidable opposition to him."

Religious organizations on the list said they had not been told formally of the ban.

B.C. to pay taxes in full to municipalities

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Starting next year, the provincial government will pay full municipal taxes on all its property holdings, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Wednesday.

For years, municipalities have been pressuring the provincial government to pay full municipal taxes, instead of the 15-mill grant in lieu of taxes.

In his inaugural address two years ago, Victoria Mayor Michael Young called the government the province's biggest "corporate welfare bum."

Now, Victoria is among the municipalities who stand to gain most from the additional revenue source.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of city council's finance committee, said in an interview from Vernon that the city will get an estimated $425,000 in additional revenue as a result of the government's decision to pay full municipal taxes.

Glazier said the amount was equivalent to about 2.5 mills. This year, under the 15-mill grant structure, the government paid $774,000 to the city in lieu of property taxes.

Glazier said next year's anticipated revenue from taxes paid by the provincial government was $1.2 million.

Originally, it was estimated that the provincial government would pay more than $2 million to the city if it assumed its fair tax burden.

But Glazier explained that this amount would be reduced because of amendments to the Assessment Act. Changes in that act will result in assessment of all property in B.C. on a certain percentage of market value.

Commercial property will be assessed at 25 per cent of its market value.

Under existing legislation, the provincial government pays 15 mills on 50 per cent of the assessed value of all its holdings.

Since commercial property is to be assessed at 25 per cent of market value, the 15-mill grant would have produced only half the revenue.

Starting next year, the province will pay the going 48-mill rate on 25 per cent of market value.

Glazier said although the change would produce less than was expected, it would "make for a very fair and equitable bottom line."

The provincial government would pay no more and no less than any other property owner in the city and that, he said, was "very, very welcome news."

Embattled Lance resigns

Back to Georgia —AP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, his voice choked with emotion, announced Bert Lance's resignation Wednesday, saying his close friend and budget director decided independently to step aside and "I think he's made the right decision."

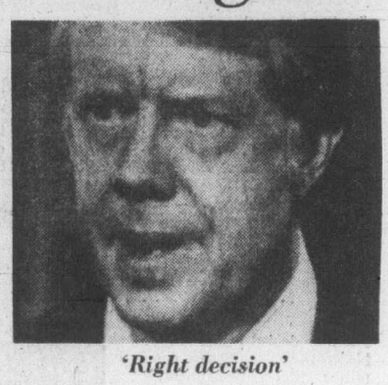
In a televised news conference delayed two hours so Lance could compose his farewell letter, Carter acknowledged some of the allegations against Lance were true, but placed much of the blame on the "extraordinary standards" his administration had tried to set.

Although the president said he agreed with Lance's decision to return to Georgia after eight months in the administration, he paid strong tribute to the 46-year-old banker whom he considered irreplaceable. He did not name a successor immediately.

Lance, in a letter Carter read at the news conference, said his conscience remained clear and he still felt he could be an effective budget director.

But, noting the continuing controversy surrounding his name, Lance said: "I have to ask the question: At what price do I remain?"

"I am convinced that I can continue to be an effective director of the Office of Management and Budget," Lance said. "However, because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it, I have decided to submit my resignation as director of OMB. "I desire to return to my native state of Georgia."



'Right decision'

Said Carter: "Bert Lance is my friend. I know him personally as well as if he was my own brother. I know him . . . to be a good and an honorable man . . nothing that I have heard or read has shaken my belief in Bert's ability and integrity"

Carter said Lance's resignation was "a courageous and also a patriotic decision . . . I don't think there is any way I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance who would be as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he's been."

Lance has been under intense pressure to resign for several weeks because of allgations stemming from his years as a Georgia bank executive. He acknowledged incurring large bank overdrafts and other problems.

Peace troop swap hinted

Canada might leave Cyprus for Rhodesia

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada might be willing to exchange its role in the Cyprus peacekeeping force for participation in a new United nations group in Rhodesia, external Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Wednesday.

But the external affairs minister told reporters Ottawa remains against taking on new responsibilities in Rhodesia to add to peacekeeping duties in the Middle East and Cyprus.

He said Canada opposed having a Commonwealth force in Rhodesia.

Jamieson said Canada had a strong influence on the British proposal for a UN force and administrator to facilitate transition to majority black rule in Rhodesia. It has not yet been accepted by the Rhodesian government.

The proposal is the "only one that can work short of bloodshed," he said, noting that some aspects of the proposal remain difficult to swallow for the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia.

Jamieson was outlining his plans for the fall which include talks with British Foreign Secretary David Owen about problems in southern Africa. He is to meet Owen while visiting the United Nations this weekend.

Jamieson said a peaceful transition to black majority rule virtually depends on Smith's acceptance of the British proposal.

Along with the UN transitional group, Britain has proposed that Rhodesian troops and black liberation forces be disarmed and dispersed at the same time.

Canada strongly opposed the original British proposal for a Commonwealth force in Rhodesia because Ottawa saw prospects of a "potential Vietnam," he said. But he indicated he saw less danger of that with a broader-based UN group.

Israelis step up Lebanon stabs

Reuter

Rockets fired from Lebanese territory hit northern Israel on Wednesday as sources in Lebanon reported new Israeli incursions into war-torn southern Lebanon.

The sources said Israeli forces set up three fortified positions in Lebanon as fighting continued between the leftist-Palestinian alliance and Israeli-backed Lebanese rightists close to the border with Israel.

The move brought the number of Israeli fortified positions across the frontier to six, all overlooking villages held by the right-wing Christians, the sources said.

Israeli officials maintained silence about the reports of new Israeli advances into Lebanon and correspondents' reports from the border area were strictly censored.

A spokesman for the Palestinian commandos said Israeli gunboats were blockading the south Lebanese port of Tyre.

Meanwhile, an Israeli spokesman said Katyusha rockets, a type used by guerrilla forces, landed on the Israeli town of Safad, about 15 kilometres from the Lebanese frontier. Two persons were injured by flying glass as residents rushed to air-raid shelters.

A few hours later more rockets fell on Ramat Alma, a few kilometres north of Safad, a spokesman said. There were no damage or casualties in that attack.

Levesque to dine with queen

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday he will attend a dinner in honor of Queen Elizabeth with the nine other provincial premiers at Prime Minister Trudeau's summer house in Harrington Lake, Que., Oct. 16.

Levesque told his weekly news conference it would be inconceivable for Quebec not to be represented, adding that the dinner with "the Queen of Great Britain" is part of Quebec's "royalty month."

Somali rebels blow up vital Ethiopian bridge

NAIROBI (UPI) — Somali rebels have blown up a vital bridge linking war-torn Ethiopia to the Red Sea, severing Addis Ababa's last overland route for fuel shipments, Somalia Radio said Wednesday.

It said guerrillas of the Afars Liberation Front blew up a bridge on the road from Addis Ababa to Assab, the last port which had been open to Ethiopian convoys from the capital.

The report also marked the first time the Somalis had broadcast a communique for the Afars front.

The Afars are one of two major tribes in the newly-independent state of Djibouti, sandwiched on the coast between Ethiopia and Somalia, and claim that the Ethiopians hold territory which historically belonged to the tribe.

Ottawa studying foreign spending curb, says paper

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says the federal government is studying a plan which would restrict to $600 a year the amount Canadian tourists could spend outside the country.

The newspaper says in today's editions it has learned that such currency controls — which, if adopted, would be the first of their kind in peacetime — would apply mainly to holiday travel because business trips abroad would be exempted.

The plan also mentions the possibility of limits on the money Canadians could send to relatives abroad, the newspaper says, noting that provisions would be made for exemptions on compassionate grounds.

The paper noted the plan was not government policy but was said to be under study by senior federal civil servants, principally those in the commerce and transport departments. The $600 figure was described by one official as "a discussion point only."

More money is being spent by Canadians abroad than is flowing into the country and the tourism deficit is seen as particularly burdensome for the economy.

The number of Canadian visits abroad in the first half of this year increased to 18.2 million, up by 8.5 per cent. The newspaper says these tourists spent $1.951 billion, about 19 per cent more than for the corresponding period last year.

Meanwhile, the number of people visiting Canada was down about three per cent in the first six months of the year compared with the first half of 1976.

The newspaper says the government is also considering ways to cut the costs of travelling within the country as an inducement to spending vacations at home to help the balance of payments.

Some new touches for Day No. 3

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

In the morning there had been a little jogging and weightlifting.

And what lay ahead was Day No. 3 in the word marathon of Rosemary Brown.

As she entered the Legislature at 2 p.m. to continue her monumental battle on behalf of the Vancouver Resources Board, Mrs. Brown (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) had added to her mounds of ammunition and trappings.

There was the usual box full of documents and the black clothing to mourn what she says is the death of the resources board. But now she was wearing a T-shirt she said she found on her desk — a black shirt with a printed message: "Kill Bill 65."

If looks could be transformed into a message, the same sentiment appeared later to be aimed at another bill — Bill Vander Zalm, the human resources minister who incurred the wrath of the Opposition with his proposed legislation to bring the resources board functions under his control.

For Rosemary Brown, the opposition human resources critic, the cause is worthy of a full-fledged filibuster — and she began her task toward the end of Monday's sitting.

By the time the Legislature called it a day at 11 p.m. Wednesday, she had put in eight hours and 45 minutes on her feet — counting the deductions for rests she had obtained when her party-mates spelled her off with various concocted point-of-order questions.

With a bouquet from one admirer, a single rose from another, a supply of throat spray and a seemingly unending list of support messages, she pressed on with the job of trying to prove that Vander Zalm is out to dehumanize the former government's model for decentralizing social aid.

She read telegrams from church groups "blessing" her, and talked a great deal about the poor of Vancouver, the native Indian population and others she said had been

She read poems and even found ways to mention U.S. President Jimmy Carter and federal cabinet minister Otto Lang without really straying from the subject.

Although she looked weary on occasion and sat with her head back when colleagues spelled her off with stalling tactics, Mrs. Brown said she was determined to go on.

"We're dealing with a very stubborn minister, but I'm not going to give up," she told the house.

There were various exchanges between the government and the Opposition, although the filibuster had left a shortage of troops. On one occasion, only 13 of the 55 members were in the house — only three over the number required for a quorum.

On another, only seven MLAs were present, but Smith rang the division bells to bring the required number in.

While some of those in the house appeared to be getting giddy by early in the evening session — there were sporadic bursts of laughter, even giggles — the tone wasn't always humorous.

"You believe anybody with guts is on an ego trip," retorted the weary but alert Mrs. Brown. "After years of being married to a doctor, you should know a little more about the anatomy than that."

Some of the attempts of the Opposition to stall for resting time were hilarious or — as Speaker Ed Smith preferred to put it — ingenious and novel.

The bill was described as imperfect and incomplete, and discussion of formality even made reference to the "king" and the need for members to be uncovered (without hats).

At one point, Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) held up a hastily printed message so that Vander Zalm could see it from across the house. It said: "Resign."

Lauk said later that Vander Zalm had replied: "I'm your only chance for re-election — why should I resign?"

Councillors want residents-only candidates rule

VERNON (CP) — Delegates at the Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention Wednesday approved a policy statement calling for local residency as the sole qualification for holding locally-elected office.

By a 198 to 173 margin, delegates voted that property-owners non-resident in a community be denied the right to run for office.

Vancouver Ald. Harry Rankin said he was pleased the UBCM had chosen to remove ownership of property "as the sole basis for running for office."

Rankin said the policy, which will be forwarded for consideration by the provincial government, prevents a person who lives in Burnaby and owns a business in Vancouver from running in Vancouver where his interests might be in conflict with those on local residents.

However the convention decided that property ownership was sufficient qualification to permit a person to vote in a community.

Delegates rejected an amendment to another policy statement that would have denied a vote to those owning property but not living in a community, then defeated a motion allowing voters to vote in only one municipality.

Jim Campbell of Saturna Island said the votes of non-residents usually work against improved services nor locals.

"Summer visitors and those who own summer camps come to vote against any move to increase taxes," he said.

Marilyn Baker of North Vancouver district moved an amendment that would have made it UBCM policy to support the restriction of each voter to one voters' list.

Said Ian Case of Saanich, supporting the motion: "It's a simple matter of whether we believe in one man, one vote."

However, the delegates, by a margin of 177-148, supported the rights of a property owner to vote in the community where he owns property, whether or not he is a full-time resident.

UBCM chooses Cariboo mayor

VERNON (CP) — Jim Fraser, mayor of Williams Lake and a member of the union of B.C. municipalities' executive for the past six years, was acclaimed Wednesday as UBCM president for 1977-78. He will succeed Mayor Pat Duke of Lumby.

All thumbs for Pepin in Halifax

HALIFAX (CP) — The drivers in the three-piece suits had no time to stop but an old gent from Springhill, N.S., salvaged a visit here Wednesday by one of Canada's leading figures in the national unity debate.

Jean-Luc Pepin, co-chairman of the Task Force on National Unity, was en route here from the airport when his car broke down, leaving him standing beside the road with his thumb out. Jean Garneau, one of Pepin's aides, said in an interview later.

"The business people with suits and ties kept speeding by but one citizen with some time to spare stopped to lend a hand," Garneau said.

"I told him every time I hear Anne Murray I'll think of him."

Miss Murray, a popular singer, is also from Springhill.

Garneau said the incident helped Pepin, who opens two days of public hearings on national unity here today, give his trip "a grass roots start."

Hundreds of workers docked by B.C Tel

VANCOUVER (CP) — An estimated 400 British Columbia Telephone Co. workers were docked a day's pay for participating in a 90-minute truck demonstration Wednesday that snarled traffic and frayed tempers in the heart of the downtown area.

In the first overt action against the company since contract negotiations broke off a week ago, more than 300 B.C. Tel trucks were driven through the city centre, bringing a deluge of complaint calls.

"This is not a job action, like the work-to-rule tactics or a strike," said a company spokesman. "This is illegal action and it inconveniences the public—and only yesterday the unionists were saying that was something they wouldn't do."

The horn-blowing demonstrators, among 9,500 members of the Telecommunication Workers Union of B.C. displayed placards calling on management to "Sign it, not sit on it," and saying, "You've got yours, give us ours."

The first slogan referred to the Noel Hall conciliation report, which called for basic wage increases of 45 cents an hour and which the union has agreed to and the company has not. The second refers to the rate increases granted this year to B.C. Tel.

The dispute involves the company's refusal to drop the principle of contracting-out work considered uneconomic within the company.

Originally, B.C. T officials ordered Wednesdays demonstrators to be suspended indefinitely, but later decided that participating workers would lose only the day's pay.

Union leaders advised the workers involved to bring in their trucks if ordered to do so, but to remain available for work for the remainder of their shifts.

"We have promised not to inconvenience a large number of subscribers through a strike," said a union spokesman.

"A relatively brief traffic tie-up doesn't seem to us to be a major public inconvenience. Besides, it let a lot of our people work off steam."

Union leaders gave no hint of what the next move, aimed at encouraging the company to agree to the Hall recommendations, would be, or where it would occur.

On Tuesday, union spokesmen said they planned "various skirmishes and harassment tactics" instead of a strike, but on Wednesday some union sources said a full-scale walkout remained a potential weapon.

The union has been in a position to strike legally since last May 30, and because it comes under the federal labor code, it is not obliged to give 72-hour strike notice.

Meanwhile, 11 telephone installers booked off the job at B.C. Tel's Port Moody office east of Vancouver Wednesday morning, and supervisory personnel were called in to take over the work.

Small blast put Quebec in the dark

MONTREAL (UPI) — Hydro Quebec probed the pieces of a white porcelain transformer Wednesday for the cause of a small blast that unravelled a sophisticated province-wide power network, triggering one of the lengthiest blackouts in recent Quebec history.

"We don't know why it blew up," Hydro spokesman Andre Saindin said of the explosion that knocked out power in most of Quebec and a corner of New Brunswick for periods of up to seven hours Tuesday.

"It could be any one of many, many reasons," he said. "We may have some preliminary idea by the end of the week."

Frisco rocked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A powerful explosion followed by fire destroyed a two-storey building at Fishermans' Wharf Wednesday, sending bodies flying through a harbor tours office and blowing out walls 25 feet away.

First reports indicated about a half-dozen persons were injured, some critically.

Dennis Fullalove, 23, a cashier in the harbor tours office, said the explosion occurred as Pacific Gas and Electric Co. workers were repairing a gas main in the building.

"Suddenly I heard this roar and it just felt like a giant picked me up and dropped me on my rump," he said.

Fullalove escaped with an arm injury but said "other people were blasted away, flying through the air." The walls were blasted at least 25 feet.

Hundreds of tourists and workers watched as flames enveloped the pier during the noon lunch hour. The smoke spread out many blocks away.

But he denied trying to hide his past from the Senate committee which recommended his confirmation as budget director in January and he said he never used political clout to get the federal government to close investigations of his activities.

Carter said Lance, who was at his Georgetown home during the news conference, did a "superb" job of defending himself in three days of testimony before the Senate governmental affairs committee last week and "he was able to clear his name when he testified."

Carter said he did not request the resignation but he and Lance communicated on the subject "without embarrassment."

The president acknowledged "there have been numerous allegations which I admit are true but a lot of the problem has been brought on Bert Lance by me, because of the extraordinary standards we have tried to set in government and the expectations of the American people that were engendered in my own campaign and my inauguration statement."

On Capitol Hill, Republican Senator Charles Percy, Lance's most persistent critic during the Senate hearings, said Carter and Lance "have made the correct decision."

"My heart goes out to the president and to the Lance family at this time," he added.

Western winners

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five ticket numbers, each worth $100,000, were drawn Wednesday in the Western Express lottery draw.

The winning numbers are 55014 in Series 07, 56175 in Series 10, 56831 in Series 18, 91856 in Series 20 and 86302 in Series 02.

Tickets with the winning numbers but in different series are worth $1,000 each. Tickets with the last four corresponding numbers in any series are worth $100 each and tickets with the last three numbers in any series are worth $25 each.

Prizes worth a total of $954,000 were drawn for.

Opgaard noted that there were 1,518 students registered at the college on Sept. 6 and added it would be another week or so before the registrar was in a position to produce a final count for the fall semester as some late arrivals were still in the process of registering.

He explained that there had been a significant increase in the total of students involved in vocational programs through the ministry of education's new $5 million scheme to encourage the training in short-term marketable skills.

Opgaard told council that the college had originated 24 different proposals. Some of these have already been approved, others have been turned down and some have still to be submitted.

Commenting on the increase in enrolment, Opgaard said that he had not expected a large increase this year "Malaspina College is already far above the average for B.C. when it comes to comparing the number of full-time students with the total population of our College Region."

Mayor to seek new term —if doctors give all-clear

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist Reporter

Sidney Mayor Dick Leigh, who won a byelection for mayor last December after only one year on council, said Tuesday he plans to run for mayor again on Nov. 19 if he gets "medical clearance" from his doctors.

Leigh, a retired Air Canada shops superintendent, believed there would be "two or three people" on council to oppose him in Sidney's first annual election in which all seven seats, including the mayor's, will be up for grabs.

Sidney and Victoria were the only Greater Victoria municipal councils to decide last year to hold annual elections for the entire council.

Leigh was recently in the cardiac unit of Royal Jubilee Hospital for what doctors diagnosed as high blood pressure.

"I have to have medical clearance before I can run, but I don't see any reason why I can't, I feel fine," he said.

Aldermen viewed as most likely to oppose the mayor are Jerry Tregaskis, James Lang and Ross Martin.

Martin and Tregaskis are at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention in Vernon, but Lang said Tuesday he would not run for mayor against Leigh. Lang said he would only run if Leigh stepped down.

Leigh
. . . three opponents

Leigh said a soon-to-be-released report by the attorney-general's ministry re-establishing a provincial court in Sidney was "looking good." Leigh said he was told by a staff member carrying out the study that there was support in the department to "bring the courts back to Sidney."

Sidney council six months ago formally requested Attorney-General Garde Gardom to re-establish a provincial court in Sidney. Sidney RCMP spend hours away from Sidney keeping court appointments in Victoria, council said.

Centralization of the provincial court system began in April, 1974, when the government relieved 44 municipalities of their provincial courts. The Sidney court was closed in early 1975.

All three upper Saanich Peninsula municipalities—Sidney, North Saanich and Central Saanich—will hold elections for aldermen on Nov. 19. In Sidney, six seats will be vacant while North Saanich will vote for four aldermen and Central Saanich for three. The fourth aldermanic seat in North Saanich is the seat Ald. George Westwood will resign when he runs for mayor in November.

Westwood, a retired naval officer, announced last week he would resign to seek the North Saanich mayoral chair. Incumbent mayor Paul Grieve announced a few days later that he would resign as mayor to run for the NDP nomination for the federal riding of Esquimalt-Saanich.

Sidney and North Saanich are the only upper peninsula municipalities holding mayoral contests in November. Central Saanich mayor Jean Butler, now in her second term, won't face an election battle until November, 1978.

There were no peninsula council meetings this week because many aldermen were in Vernon at the UBCM convention.

Youth mugs elderly man

An elderly man was mugged on Yates Street Monday night by a youth who made off with his wallet containing about $10.

Police said the man was just about to enter his apartment building at about 9 p.m. when the youth grabbed him around the neck and took his wallet.

According to police the victim waited about 10 minutes before calling them.

Broadmead

Plaza plan expected within six weeks

Plans for a multi-million-dollar regional shopping centre at Broadmead could be submitted to Saanich council within six weeks.

Rolston said Tuesday that he told the association an application could be made in four to six weeks, "but we still need to complete some internal reports in order to pull together all the reports required before an application can be made."

He made the announcement at a meeting with the association's board of directors, later confirming it at a general membership meeting.

Association president William Neilson said in an interview that Rolston also gave an undertaking to make available to the associaton copies of reports relating to the proposed centre.

Neilson said an economic feasibility study was given to Saanich by the developer several weeks ago "but we've yet to receive a copy."

He said there was no evidence of the municipality having completed any independent traffic studies, "something we will insist be done before taking the shopping centre proposal to a membership meeting."

There would be a full debate on all aspects of the proposed development once all the evidence was in, he said.

Earlier this year, the association asked council to make available all staff reports, studies and any recommendations relating to proposed centres at Tillicum and Broadmead.

Neilson said that answers were also needed on the implications for neighborhood development and existing shopping facilities, particularly the expanding Royal Oak shopping centre.

Fears of greatly increased traffic and a resultant downgrading of Broadmead residential development were expressed by association members at a recent public meeting.

Residents claim that the new shopping facilities would generate between 9,000 to 15,000 cars each day and they are worried that expanded traffic along Royal Oak Drive would downgrade Broadmead residential development.

The centre would be part of a commercial-residential development which envisages an ultimate population of between 8,000 and 10,000.

Guard dogs, TV considered for jail security

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Tuesday security measures in the form of guard dogs and closed circuit television were being considered for Wilkinson Road jail.

He also said he looked favorably upon the idea of building more remand facilities for Vancouver Island.

Gardom was responding in the Legislature to questions raised by Conservative Leader Scott Wallace as a result of the weekend escape, shooting and hostage-taking incidents.

Wallace wanted to know if Wilkinson Road might be moved from second place on the priority list to top billing with Oakalla prison on the Lower Mainland, where security "improvements" are planned.

The attorney-general said the top emphasis was remaining with Oakalla, but that Wilkinson Road was getting considerable attention and that he had just received information from a study that had been made.

The suggestions, he said, called for controlled use of guard dogs around the jail perimeter, the installation of a closed circuit television system and improved recreational facilities.

He agreed with Wallace that it would be wise to eventually have separate facilities for regular prisoners and those being held for remand.

Afterward, Gardom said in an interview that there were no hard-fast plans yet for extra remand facilities on Vancouver Island, even though the idea appealed to him.

He said he felt a succession of governments over the last 25 years hadn't paid enough attention to the prison accommodation problem.

Reformed addicts say future in jeopardy now that their past is fodder for snoops

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

When the news broke last week, Sally didn't know whether to scream out in anger, or sit down and cry.

All that she had been working toward — all that she wanted so desperately — seemed threatened, she said, by the change of a few words of B.C. legislation.

The amendment to the Alcohol and Drug Commission Act removed some of the protection of confidentiality for addicts receiving voluntary treatment. It passed after withstanding a concerted attack from the opposition, which had claimed it was a massive breach of public trust.

THE CHANGE meant the files of the addicts could now be produced as evidence in court proceedings.

On Tuesday Sally sat in her Victoria home with her husband, Ed, both of them former heroin users, both now counting the blessings of new "straight" lives, both expressing concern for the future because of the change in legislation.

They say they escaped the tortuous world of the heroin addict about three years ago and in recent times have found respectability and promising new jobs. They also say they are concerned not only for themselves, but also for all addicts sincerely trying to break the habit. They believe the removal of protection will effectively bar the door to many.

(Their names are not really Ed and Sally, but those names are being used here to protect them in the new lives they have chosen to live).

THE WORD "EVIDENCE" that was used in describing the legislative change had a particular shock effect on Sally. For some time now she has been planning to begin a legal fight for the custody of her daughter.

"We were waiting until she (daughter) was old enough and then we were going to go to court to fight for her return," Sally said. "But now what they'll do is pull the file from the clinic."

THE CLINIC is where both Sally and Ed have received methadone treatment in their long journey along the road to recovery.

They said they spoke freely about their lives when they first went to the clinic because they believed what they had to say would never be passed on to others.

"They told us that everything we said was confidential," said Ed. "Now it turns out that it wasn't. How would you feel about it if you were in that position?"

"THE GOVERNMENT," said Sally, "broke a confidence with the addicts. It really did."

During debate of the amendment, Health Minister Robert McClelland had indicated there was a need to make such files available for evidence in child custody cases.

That hits Sally where she lives. She expects to go to court within a year or so to try to get her daughter back. She concedes the hearing would be in family court and free of publicity. But she fears what she once said in confidential conversation will be used against her. And she is also afraid that word of her past will be spread simply by the fact that more people will have access to it through the hearing.

BOTH SALLY and Ed are making the move because they think they are finally able to offer the child a good home, a place with stability, care and love.

It has not always been this way, they say. The road back has been painful almost beyond belief.

"It hasn't been easy," Sally says. "The first six months were really tough. We were both addicts and we were fighting our way back together.

"I'm not saying that we're angels. We have our faults. But we're making it. We're making it because we've been trying. Oh, God, how we've been trying."

BECAUSE OF THEIR break with the past, Ed and Sally have found fairly good jobs. They are working hard and enjoying it. They feel they are slowly building a future and it is a future which they hope will include the missing daughter — Sally's daughter from a previous marriage.

The moral support comes from Ed.

"I'll stake my job on it," he says. "I'm willing to take the chance on losing what we have gained. It's that important."

What he is saying is that not everyone knows of their past. It hasn't been necessary for them to know. But if it all has to come out through the lack of confidentiality in the fight for the child, then he is willing to let it happen.

MEANWHILE, both he and Sally are bitter. They don't feel this had to be the case. They believe the government was cruel, unfeeling, in opening the confidential files — retroactively — to the courts.

"Now that the government has broken this confidence, how many addicts are going to go to the clinic unless they are forced to go, which is what they intend to force them to do in the long run?" says Sally.

"We never would have talked to that clinic as openly as we did if we had known that one day this would happen.

"We've worked so hard for what we've got, and I just don't think the government has got the right to do that to us."

Ed agrees that it has been a long, hard fight.

"WE'VE BEEN DOING so well ever since we started going to that clinic for treatment. It would be very easy to give up, to go downtown and blow the whole thing. But for us, that would be suicide. We've done so well.

"But where do we go from here if they use the file and pull the rug from under us?"

Ed stops to think for a moment, then refers to what he now sees as the hopelessness of the addicts.

"Who are they going to talk to now?" he asks.

Crossing is okayed

COURTENAY—Survey and design work will proceed immediately for the long-awaited second crossing of the Courtenay River.

The announcement was made in a press release on Tuesday by Alex Fraser, highways and public works minister.

Although city council had been pressing for definite word on when the project could be expected to proceed, Mayor William Moore expressed surprise at the speed with which the announcement had been made.

As was expected the crossing will be at 17th Street and will involve a new road system to connect 17th and the Island Highway at a spot near the Headquarters Road turnoff.

Design for the new bridge, which is expected to be a low-level span, will proceed immediately, Fraser said.

Tenders for the roadwork necessary for the crossing and the new bridge are expected to be called in May of 1978, with completion expected in the following year.

Swan

NANAIMO — Retired high school principal Jim Swan has been named Citizen of the Year by the Greater Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce.

The award was announced Wednesday night at the chamber's installation meeting.

Swan, who retired as principal of Nanaimo District Senior Secondary School several years ago, has kept busier than ever with community activities, and it is for those activities that he was honored by the chamber.

The award is given annually.

Among his community activities, Swan lists membership in the Nanaimo and B.C. arts councils, the Gyro club and work on the miners reunion committee and the B.C. Day picnic committee.

During centennial year he served on that committee, and he has been chairman and treasurer of the Nanaimo Red Cross Society.

He has also been active in the Meals-on-Wheels program and he is a church warden at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

House of driftwood

Right frame of mind

By JACK FOSSUM
Colonist Correspondent

Duncan area may have its glass castle, but Merville district has its house of driftwood.

"It was a case of necessity," said Jim Egan when asked how he got the idea of building his 1,600-square-foot driftwood house. "We had only limited funds and it was just a case of getting the cheapest possible building material."

After selling their business on Thetis Island, Jim and his partner Jack Nesbit looked around for a place to live in retirement. They finally decided on a 3½-acre tract of land in Merville district.

"I had read about how the early settlers in the eastern United States built their homes from wood and stone cleared from their land, how they sawed the wood into blocks and placed them one upon the other to frame in their houses," said Egan.

He explained the building process, from the gathering of cedar driftwood on the beaches at Little River, cutting it into 12-inch lengths of no more than 12-inch thickness, to placing the blocks to form walls in a mosaic of wood and white mortar.

"After setting the floor on the concrete foundation, I nailed on a two-inch rough cedar lower plate, framed in the window and door openings and joined the uprights with a two-by-six upper plate," he said.

"I set the first blocks in the window area so I could frame in the windows, which I made from salvaged double-plate glass and rough cedar."

After finishing the framing, Egan sprayed the wood with a solution of used crankcase oil mixed with diesel fuel "to keep termites away and give the wood a mahogany hue."

The house, with a floor area of 1,600 square feet, has two bedrooms, a large living room with free-standing fireplace in a planting area in the centre, kitchen with dining area and Swedish fireplace, utility room and a large bathroom.

The inside walls require little or no finishing. "No insulation was required, since the foot-thick walls provide protection equal to 4½ inches of insulation," said Egan.

The house has electric heat installed, but, said Egan, "last winter, our first here, we found the two fireplaces adequate for heating the whole house."

"We began construction in May this year and moved in during October with still most of the inside finishing to be done."

Egan had seen the curved wall house design in a magazine, he said, "and we merely modified and adapted it to our own purpose."

He estimates the total cost at about $20,000, exclusive of land and labor.

Originally from Ontario, Egan and his business partner and lifelong friend Nesbit came west to establish themselves in a business they had pursued in the East — collecting and preserving marine life specimens for universities and other institutions. They settled on Thetis Island, one of the Gulf Islands.

They had a thriving business there, Egan said, until they sold out a couple of years ago. "We were not looking to getting rich, we preferred a simple life style, and when Nesbit's health began to fail we decided to find a quiet place to build our retirement home."

Unlike the people in the glass house who have commercialized its uniqueness, the two bachelors in the driftwood house like their privacy.

Miracle's fish diet hiked five pounds

The killer whale Miracle gets five more pounds of fish today as she continues to overcome the intestinal blockage which had her handlers anxious after she went off her food early last week.

Sealand manager Angus Matthews said Tuesday the five extra pounds of ling cod fillets would be distributed over her 7 a.m. to 1 a.m. hourly feedings. That will bring her total daily allowance up to 25 pounds, almost half of what she was receiving in whole cod and herring before her latest setback.

"Behaviorly she's right back to where she was before last week," Matthews said. One Sealand employee on duty Tuesday night at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, Miracle's home since she was found floundering in Menzies Bay over a month ago, described her as ". . . cruising around enjoying herself."

The next big scheduled event for Miracle is her medical Thursday when, among other things, blood samples will be taken.

"We'll be very disappointed if they show anything alarming — I don't expect there to be," Matthews said.

Mercy mission turns to warm glow

Trip testimony to unity

When Nicole Ford set out in her battered old station wagon more than two months ago, she had no idea that her trip to Cobalt, Ont., would make headlines across Canada.

The purpose of her journey was to deliver food and clothing to Cobalt which had been ravaged by a fire that made more than 400 people homeless.

As it turned out, Mrs. Ford's drive to Ontario became a testimony to Canadian unity.

She returned this week with the firm conviction that the vast majority of Canadians want a united Canada.

There was an entry from a Mountie in Saskatchewan: "To our friends on the way East — hopefully for a united Canada. God bless you all."

Her scrapbooks were crammed with mementos given her by well-meaning people along the route. There were lapel buttons, flowers, maple leaves, tree twigs and stickers. Mrs. Ford said wherever she went people told her they wanted a united Canada.

Mrs. Ford, a mother of three children, lives at 4221 Torquay in Saanich.

She said she delivered a trailer full of goods to Cobalt, but the most important aspect of her trip turned out to be the unplanned unity campaign.

Not that there weren't any snags. When she left Victoria, accompanied by two friends and her six-year-old son Donald, she had about $70 cash, and two credit cards.

The cash dwindled rapidly, she said, and on quite a few occasions, she went without food.

Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles are keeping things interesting in the only major league baseball division race that's really still up for grabs, the American League East.

Boston clipped New York Yankees 3-2 Wednesday night and Baltimore blanked Toronto Blue Jays 4-0, slicing the first-place Yankees' lead over the Orioles to two games and two and one-half games over the Red Sox.

Kansas City Royals made it next to a sure thing in the Western Division, ensuring a tie for the title by outslugging Minnesota Twins 10-5.

George Scott snapped a 2-2 tie with his 33rd home run with two out in the sixth inning, then turned in a spectacular double play at first base to end the game with the Yankees.

After the Yankees pulled into a 2-2 tie on Lou Piniella's two-out single in the sixth, Scott clubbed his first homer since Sept. 8 against starter and loser Mike Torrez, now 16-13.

Luis Tiant surrendered a homer to Piniella to open the fifth inning and then needed relief help from Jim Willoughby after Thurman Munson singled, Reggie Jackson walked and Chris Chambliss walked, all in the sixth inning.

Relief ace Bill Campbell took over in the seventh inning and checked the Yankees on three hits the rest of the way. Mickey Rivers singled in the Yankees' ninth but Scott dove to his right to spear Roy White's line drive, then beat Rivers back to the bag for the game-ending double play.

Lee May cracked a two-run homer, his 25th of the season, following a two-out walk to Ken Singleton in the fourth inning. The shot was Baltimore's first hit off Jef Byrd, 2-12. The 20-year-old Byrd, who has now lost eight straight games, allowed two more runs in the fifth after left fielder Steve Bowling lost Mark Belanger's line drive in the lights and it fell in for a double.

Darrell Porter's 16th home run of the year touched off a six-run seventh inning that clinched Kansas City's tie for first place in the West. Jim Colborn picked up his 18th win with relief help from Doug Bird. The Royals are 11 games in front of their closest competition, Texas Rangers, who bounced California Angels 9-1.

Meanwhile, Sixto Lezcano of Milwaukee hit the 3,430th homer of the year in the majors, breaking the all-time single season record. Minutes earlier, May's blast in Baltimore equalled the previous mark, set in 1970. Despite Lezcano's heroics, the Brewers went down to Seattle Mariners 11-4.

In the National League, Cincinnati Reds picked up a meaningless game on Los Angeles Dodgers in the Western Division with a 3-2 win as the Dodgers fell to San Francisco Giants 5-4. The Dodgers clinched the division title Tuesday.

Philadelphia Phillies, ahead of Pittsburgh Pirates by seven games in the East, lost to Chicago Cubs 2-0 as Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined on a seven-hit shutout.

Shields drew two assists but Cougars dropped 5-3 decision.

Cougar coach not surprised when Breakers snap string

By STAN COOPER

Jack Shupe had a hunch Seattle Breakers would be a tough test Wednesday at Memorial Arena and the Victoria Cougar coach was correct.

Cougars saw their preseason win streak stopped at seven games when the former Kamloops Chiefs posted a 5-3 victory in a Western Canada Hockey League exhibition game played before about 1000 fans.

Breakers, playing only their fourth game since opening training camp earlier this month, had a decided edge in the first two periods and built leads of 2-0 and 4-0 before the Cougars got untracked.

Cougars were playing their fifth game in as many nights and their eighth in the last nine days and had several of their top holdovers sitting in the stands nursing injuries.

"This team (Seattle) is bound to be tougher than New Westminster," Shupe said prior to the game, referring to the defending league champion Bruins. Cougars knocked off the Bruins in four straight meetings since last Saturday although the Bruins also have several key players on the injury list.

Cougars showed some power in the final 20 minutes and narrowed the margin to 4-2 before Ryan Walter scored his second goal of the game with less than four minutes to play to clinch the decision, Seattle's third win in preseason play.

Russ Wilderman also scored twice for the Breakers and Greg Dunn added the other goal.

Rookie Sid Giroux, with his third goal in as many games, Geordie Robertson and rookie Ron Johnson scored for the Cougars, who took 12 of 14 minor penalties assessed. Each team drew three majors and Cougar Brent Gogol was tagged with a misconduct and game misconduct after a second-period scuffle with Dunn.

Breakers scored once with a two-man advantage while Robertson and Giroux each scored with the Cougars shorthanded.

Holdover centres Gary Lupul (ligament damage) and Dennis Penske (sore hip) and big leftwinger Curt Fraser (sore shoulder) all sat out the game as did defenceman Leroy Heck (groin injury) and they were missed.

Best of the Cougar newcomers were Giroux and Mike Shields, both graduates of the B.C. Junior Hockey League Nanaimo Clippers. Giroux did yeoman service as a penalty killer while Shields, who bears a startling resemblance to former Cougar Danny Lucas, drew two assists and hit the goalpost on a third-period breakaway.

Cougars close out their preseason grind tonight in New Westminster and have Friday to prepare for the league opener here Saturday night against the Bruins. Shupe said several players will be reassigned following tonight's game.

In another Wednesday exhibition, Billings Bighorns (formerly Calgary Centennials) scored a 7-5 win over Lethbridge Broncos in the Alberta city.

Like it or not they're in book

Jogging into record book is Sixto Lezcano of Milwaukee Brewers whose two-run homer Wednesday night was the 3,430th major-league homer of the season, breaking the all-time single-season record. A disconsolate Doc Medich in background will probably go into the book too, as having given up the hit.

Boston coach finds —

U.S. players hungrier

FITCHBURG, Mass. (CP) — American-born players entering the National Hockey League display more dedication and heart than do their Canadian-born counterparts, Boston Bruins' coach Don Cherry said Wednesday.

"Canadian-born players entering the NHL these days take everything for granted," Cherry said. "All these No. 1 draft picks come to training camp with swelled heads.

"The American kid, on the other hand, knows where he stands, knows he's fighting an uphill battle. Slowly but surely he's starting to win."

The Bruins have two U.S.-born players on their roster, Mike Milbury and Earl Anderson and have invited five more to their training camp here.

"The American boy is a lot hungrier, a lot tougher," Cherry continued. "He hasn't polished his skills as finely as the Canadian player, but he makes up for it in desire."

Milbury, a native of Brighton, Mass. joined Boston four years ago from Colgate University. Next to Brad Park he is considered the Bruins best defencemen.

"Milbury is an example of what I'm talking about," Cherry said. "He joined our organization technically unsound and developed after two years in the minors. His desire to succeed paid off."

Cherry, NHL coach-of-the-year in 1976, predicts Americans will comprise 25 per cent of all NHL players within "three to four years."

In the first six rounds of this year's NHL amateur draft, 18 players from U.S. colleges and universities were selected.

Speedway season ends on weekend

The veteran driver takes a 211 point lead into the final weekend of the Vancouver Island racing season but still needs at least a fair showing in the final two races to clinch the title.

Western Speedway completes its season with the double-points championship main event Saturday. It was expected to be the final race of the season but the super-stocks were rained out at Nanaimo last week and a double-points race will be held at the Hub City Sunday.

A driver sweeping all the races and time trials can earn a total of 232 points each night. Jim Caudwell hopes to do just that and pass Collins but he also had to worry about being caught by third-place Jerry Ferrie who is only 120 points out of second place.

The remaining positions in the top ten are also up for grabs. Only 34 points separate fourth-place Ron Fleet and fifth-place Gary Bemister.

The hobby-stocks are also running Saturday at Western as they wind up their season with a double-points race. John Robillard of Campbell River has clinched the championship but George Shillito is in second place only 15 points ahead of fellow Victorian Al Miller.

Lambrick pulls upset

Lambrick defeated favorite Mount Douglas 15-12, 15-12, while Belmont girls downed Dunsmuir 15-8, 15-12. Spectrum knocked off Reynolds 15-5, 15-11. Victoria High clipped Oak Bay 15-9, 15-11 behind strong performances by setters Kathy Bryant and Sharon Dhillon and Parkland downed Esquimalt 15-9, 15-9.

In opening boys' action, setter Jay Wilson and spiker Brian Donald led Esquimalt past Parkland 15-6, 15-10. Spectrum defeated Reynolds 15-12, 15-11, Belmont edged Dunsmuir 15-13, 15-11, and Mount Douglas swamped Lambrick Park 15-6, 15-4.

309 IN MEMORIAM

Wonderful memories woven in gold
These are the memories we tenderly hold
Deep in our hearts his memory is kept
To love, to cherish and never forget.
As always loved and remembered, Mum and Dad.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Char-ladle

Give us say on Royal Oak, ratepayers ask alderman

Saanich Ald. Fred Severson has been asked to assure residents that they will be allowed to make representations on studies related to the economics of industrial development at Royal Oak.

The request was made in a letter to Severson, chairman of council's lands, planning and housing committee by Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association president Richard Gauthier.

The studies, being done by municipal planning staff, should be completed early next month.

Gauthier, seeking more information about the studies, also asks if residents could help identify other studies which should be prepared.

He said it was anticipated the studies would seek answers to basic questions such as the need for new industrial land and if the Royal Oak site would provide economically attractive land.

Gauthier wants all pros and cons of the proposed development examined, including substantiated figures on the site's economic feasibility, municipal servicing costs, road development plans and the net effect of industrial development on municipal revenue.

He also wants an assurance from Severson that all reports will be made public before a public hearing later this year on the industrial zone proposal.

B.C. to pay taxes in full to municipalities

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Starting next year, the provincial government will pay full municipal taxes on all its property holdings, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Wednesday.

For years, municipalities have been pressuring the provincial government to pay full municipal taxes, instead of the 15-mill grant in lieu of taxes.

In his inaugural address two years ago, Victoria Mayor Michael Young called the government the province's biggest "corporate welfare bum."

Now, Victoria is among the municipalities who stand to gain most from the additional revenue source.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of city council's finance committee, said in an interview from Vernon that the city will get an estimated $425,000 in additional revenue as a result of the government's decision to pay full municipal taxes.

Glazier said the amount was equivalent to about 2.5 mills. This year, under the 15-mill grant structure, the government paid $774,000 to the city in lieu of property taxes.

Glazier said next year's anticipated revenue from taxes paid by the provincial government was $1.2 million.

Originally, it was estimated that the provincial government would pay more than $2 million to the city if it assumed its fair tax burden.

But Glazier explained that this amount would be reduced because of amendments to the Assessment Act. Changes in that act will result in assessment of all property in B.C. on a certain percentage of market value.

Commercial property will be assessed at 25 per cent of its market value.

Under existing legislation, the provincial government pays 15 mills on 50 per cent of the assessed value of all its holdings.

Since commercial property is to be assessed at 25 per cent of market value, the 15-mill grant would have produced only half the revenue.

Starting next year, the province will pay the going 48-mill rate on 25 per cent of market value.

Glazier said although the change would produce less than was expected, it would "make for a very fair and equitable bottom line."

The provincial government would pay no more and no less than any other property owner in the city and that, he said, was "very, very welcome news."

Embattled Lance resigns

Back to Georgia —AP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, his voice choked with emotion, announced Bert Lance's resignation Wednesday, saying his close friend and budget director decided independently to step aside and "I think he's made the right decision."

In a televised news conference delayed two hours so Lance could compose his farewell letter, Carter acknowledged some of the allegations against Lance were true, but placed much of the blame on the "extraordinary standards" his administration had tried to set.

Although the president said he agreed with Lance's decision to return to Georgia after eight months in the administration, he paid strong tribute to the 46-year-old banker whom he considered irreplaceable. He did not name a successor immediately.

Lance, in a letter Carter read at the news conference, said his conscience remained clear and he still felt he could be an effective budget director.

But, noting the continuing controversy surrounding his name, Lance said: "I have to ask the question: At what price do I remain?"

"I am convinced that I can continue to be an effective director of the Office of Management and Budget," Lance said. "However, because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it, I have decided to submit my resignation as director of OMB. "I desire to return to my native state of Georgia."

'Right decision'

Said Carter: "Bert Lance is my friend. I know him personally as well as if he was my own brother. I know him . . . to be a good and an honorable man . . nothing that I have heard or read has shaken my belief in Bert's ability and integrity."

'At what price do I remain?'

Carter said Lance's resignation was "a courageous and also a patriotic decision . . . I don't think there is any way I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance who would be as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he's been."

Lance has been under intense pressure to resign for several weeks because of allegations stemming from his years as a Georgia bank executive. He acknowledged incurring large bank overdrafts and other problems.

Peace troop swap hinted

Canada might leave Cyprus for Rhodesia

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada might be willing to exchange its role in the Cyprus peacekeeping force for participation in a new United Nations group in Rhodesia, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Wednesday.

But the external affairs minister told reporters Ottawa remains against taking on new responsibilities in Rhodesia to add to peacekeeping duties in the Middle East and Cyprus.

He said Canada opposed having a Commonwealth force in Rhodesia.

Jamieson said Canada had a strong influence on the British proposal for a UN force and administrator to facilitate transition to majority black rule in Rhodesia. It has not yet been accepted by the Rhodesian government.

The proposal is the "only one that can work short of bloodshed," he said, noting that some aspects of the proposal remain difficult to swallow for the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia.

Jamieson was outlining his plans for the fall which include talks with British Foreign Secretary David Owen about problems in southern Africa. He is to meet Owen while visiting the United Nations this weekend.

Jamieson said a peaceful transition to black majority rule virtually depends on Smith's acceptance of the British proposal.

Along with the UN transitional group, Britain has proposed that Rhodesian troops and black liberation forces be disarmed and dispersed at the same time.

Canada strongly opposed the original British proposal for a Commonwealth force in Rhodesia because Ottawa saw prospects of a "potential Vietnam," he said. But he indicated he saw less danger of that with a broader-based UN group.

Israelis step up Lebanon stabs

Reuter

Rockets fired from Lebanese territory hit northern Israel on Wednesday as sources in Lebanon reported new Israeli incursions into war-torn southern Lebanon.

The sources said Israeli forces set up three fortified positions in Lebanon as fighting continued between the leftist-Palestinian alliance and Israeli-backed Lebanese rightists close to the border with Israel.

The move brought the number of Israeli fortified positions across the frontier to six, all overlooking villages held by the right-wing Christians, the sources said.

Israeli officials maintained silence about the reports of new Israeli advances into Lebanon and correspondents' reports from the border area were strictly censored.

A spokesman for the Palestinian commandos said Israeli gunboats were blockading the south Lebanese port of Tyre.

Meanwhile, an Israeli spokesman said Katyusha rockets, a type used by guerrilla forces, landed on the Israeli town of Safad, about 15 kilometres from the Lebanese frontier. Two persons were injured by flying glass as residents rushed to air-raid shelters.

A few hours later more rockets fell on Ramat Alma, a few kilometres north of Safad, a spokesman said. There were no damage or casualties in that attack.

Levesque to dine with queen

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday he will attend a dinner in honor of Queen Elizabeth with the nine other provincial premiers at Prime Minister Trudeau's summer house in Harrington Lake, Que., Oct. 16.

Levesque told his weekly news conference it would be inconceivable for Quebec not to be represented, adding that the dinner with "the Queen of Great Britain" is part of Quebec's "royalty month."

Somali rebels blow up vital Ethiopian bridge

NAIROBI (UPI) — Somali rebels have blown up a vital bridge linking war-torn Ethiopia to the Red Sea, severing Addis Ababa's last overland route for fuel shipments, Somalia Radio said Wednesday.

It said guerrillas of the Afars Liberation Front blew up a bridge on the road from Addis Ababa to Assab, the last port which had been open to Ethiopian convoys from the capital.

The report also marked the first time the Somalis had broadcast a communique for the Afars front.

The Afars are one of two major tribes in the newly-independent state of Djibouti, sandwiched on the coast between Ethiopia and Somalia, and claim that the Ethiopians hold territory which historically belonged to the tribe.

Ottawa studying travel spending curb, says paper

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says the federal government is studying a plan which would restrict to $600 a year the amount Canadian tourists could spend outside the country.

The newspaper says in today's editions it has learned that such currency controls — which, if adopted, would be the first of their kind in peacetime — would apply mainly to holiday travel because business trips abroad would be exempted.

The plan also mentions the possibility of limits on the money Canadians could send to relatives abroad, the newspaper says, noting that provisions would be made for exemptions on compassionate grounds.

The paper noted the plan was not government policy but was said to be under study by senior federal civil servants, principally those in the commerce and transport departments. The $600 figure was described by one official as "a discussion point only."

More money is being spent by Canadians abroad than is flowing into the country and the tourism deficit is seen as particularly burdensome for the economy.

The number of Canadian visits abroad in the first half of this year increased to 18.2 million, up by 8.5 per cent. The newspaper says these tourists spent $1.951 billion, about 19 per cent more than for the corresponding period last year.

Meanwhile, the number of people visiting Canada was down about three per cent in the first six months of the year compared with the first half of 1976.

The newspaper says the government is also considering ways to cut the costs of travelling within the country as an inducement to spending vacations at home to help the balance of payments.

Some new touches for Day No. 3

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

In the morning there had been a little jogging and weightlifting.

And what lay ahead was Day No. 3 in the word marathon of Rosemary Brown.

As she entered the Legislature at 2 p.m. to continue her monumental battle on behalf of the Vancouver Resources Board, Mrs. Brown (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) had added to her mounds of ammunition and trappings.

There was the usual box full of documents and the black clothing to mourn what she says is the death of the resources board. But now she was wearing a T-shirt she said she found on her desk — a black shirt with a printed message: "Kill Bill 65."

If looks could be transformed into a message, the same sentiment appeared later to be aimed at another bill — Bill Vander Zalm, the human resources minister who incurred the wrath of the Opposition with his proposed legislation to bring the resources board functions under his control.

For Rosemary Brown, the opposition human resources critic, the cause is worthy of a full-fledged filibuster — and she began her task toward the end of Monday's sitting.

By the time the Legislature called it a day at 11 p.m. Wednesday, she had put in eight hours and 45 minutes on her feet — counting the deductions for rests she had obtained when her party-mates spelled her off with various concocted point-of-order questions.

With a bouquet from one admirer, a single rose from another, a supply of throat spray and a seemingly unending list of support messages, she pressed on with the job of trying to prove that Vander Zalm is out to dehumanize the former government's model for decentralizing social aid.

She read telegrams from church groups "blessing" her, and talked a great deal about the poor of Vancouver, the native Indian population and others she said had been

WASTE NOT, WANT NOT

Sad time of year when city employees remove flowers from beds at Beacon Hill Park was given brief tinge of delight Wednesday as passerby found she could help herself to as many as she wanted.

Sidney to push for breakwater

Chamber president Henry Vissers said the proposal would be discussed soon with Sidney council "to ensure our plans are in concert with what the town wants."

He said the location and environmental aspects would need considerable study.

The breakwater would provide protection for the government wharf at the foot of Beacon Avenue and stimulate provision of needed extra moorage for pleasure craft, he said.

The chamber hopes to get federal approval of a breakwater on the grounds that an increasing number of boats are tying up at the government wharf in summer.

The boats are sometimes exposed to heavy swells and in the fall are in danger from sudden storms.

Vissers said it seemed to him that money spent over the past few years on repairs and maintenance, along with the cost of installation and removal each year of the main floats and ramps, could have been put to better use constructing a breakwater.

He said it was only logical that protection be improved in a town which attracted so many boaters.

"We should be pressing full steam ahead with development of a top-notch marina, not sitting idly by while other centres develop such essential facilities."

"We certainly are not doing too much to keep visitors in the peninsula, especially the boating public," he said.

He suggested a marina similar to one at Friday Harbor.

He estimated the cost of a breakwater "in the millions," but said it would be money well spent.

Vissers said much of Sidney's future prosperity depended on a breakwater. Existing docking facilities at the foot of Beacon include about eight floats which can accommodate 25 to 30 boats.

The basin, however, is subjected to high southeast and northwest winds.

"The entire Saanich peninsula stands to benefit by a breakwater," he said.

A decade ago, the transport department conducted a survey and recommended against a breakwater because there were ample private facilities for small craft in protected harbors further along the coast.

The Sidney chamber, however, said the department overlooked the fact that Sidney was a port of entry and as such was entitled to consideration.

Vissers said the chamber was informed recently that the department was considering not replacing floats removed this fall.

The trial on charges of fraud involving $700,000 in cut-price sales has been tentatively set to start Dec. 5 in Victoria County Court, and is expected to take two to three weeks.

Saanich police laid charges April 20 against 32-year-old Lauren Gail Phillips, 921 Leslie, in a matter of sales of motor vehicles, real estate, furniture, and motor vessels which, if all delivered, would have amounted to millions of dollars.

The allegations are that as many as 400 people may have been involved and that many Vancouver Island residents north of the Greater Victoria area as well as the Mainland were participants.

Progress-or-die expansion try at Racquet Club

The financially-troubled Racquet Club of Victoria is proposing a $750,000 expansion program to its members on the basis of "progress or die."

Club president John McBride said Wednesday that the proposal, which calls for construction of five covered tennis courts and eight racquetball courts in a single-storey building on club-owned land adjacent to the present property, will be placed before the club's 831 members at a general meeting Oct. 26.

The plan calls for the recruiting of 500 new members, each to be assessed the $600 joining fee. The money, to be used as interim financing, would be placed in trust until the balance could be raised through a financial institution.

McBride said a series of information meetings would be held to outline the proposal to the membership.

He said directors felt that, because of the popularity of both indoor tennis and racquetball, the membership drive should be successful, and with the new facility built, increased membership could be expected.

Bubble-type units had been investigated as a possibility but they were ruled out because they had not been proven, he said.

"The proposal is based on the covered tennis courts attracting about 500 new members," he said. "But we will have to do the initial selling job to get them. We have adopted the attitude of progress or die."

The building would be erected on land immediately west of the present facility.

Earlier this year the club failed in efforts to obtain a grant from Saanich to help it over its financial problems.

Aldermen, after several debates, rejected a recommendation of the finance committee that the club be given a grant of $21,826 to cover this year's school tax bill.

McBride said a membership drive in May brought in 200 members who joined to participate in the club's summer program.

"About 95 per cent have stayed on," he said, adding that "we enjoyed a great summer."

Sail Canadian, says labor

Coastal shipping should be carried out by Canadian-manned and Canadian-built vessels, the Victoria Labor Council said Wednesday night.

The council passed a unanimous resolution to go to the upcoming B.C. Federation of Labor convention in November and the next Canadian Labor Congress meeting in October that shipping in all Canadian coastal waters should be reserved for Canadian vessels. It was pointed out that the U.S. is preparing for heightened shipping activity in northern Canadian and Arctic waters.

Shipping restrictions pressed by council

The resolution was proposed by Neil Hindle of the boilermakers union. Council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan said following the meeting, attended by 57 delegates representing 24 unions, that the resolution was passed with the idea that the two senior labor bodies would have more influence than the Victoria Labor Council in Ottawa to pass legislation.

Ryan said the resolution was significant with respect to the unemployment situation in shipyards and in the West Coast and Canadian shipping industry. The Victoria Labor Council also passed a resolution that the Canadian government should re-establish a merchant marine.

The council discussed the unemployment situation at length. Bill Smalley, staff representative of the Canadian Labor Congress in Victoria, outlined for delegates a program by CLC to bring down unemployment and "put a human face" on national unemployment figures.

Smalley said the CLC would meet next month to "make employment the first political priority."

He said the CLC would attempt to "awaken everyone to the fact that behind the disgraceful national statistics of eight per cent unemployed there are stories of individual human suffering and pain."

The CLC, joined by unemployment committees of labour councils around the country, would:

- Localize Statistics Canada figures and personalize the cost of unemployment to individuals.
- Point out what unemployment costs each worker in dollars and cents and the billions of dollars in costs Canada in lost revenue.
- Examine the creation of local job opportunities, discuss alternate economic policies, and dig up the figures for the "hidden unemployed" around the country, the dropouts from the work force and those not registered with Canada Manpower.

"It's a misconception that unemployment hurts only those who are out of work," Smalley said.

Health fair opens today

Co-ordinated by the Health Education Centre, more than a dozen agencies and organizations involved in public health are participating. Fitness testing and counselling will be part of the fair.

This week, a million

Before the week is out somebody is going to walk into the Provincial Museum and find himself — or herself — commanding an awful lot of attention.

At least, government forecasters are predicting that the millionth visitor this year to the museum will make an appearance this week. When it happens it will mark the sixth consecutive year that the museum has had a million visitors.

Crater shrinks to pothole

Saanich police admitted Wednesday they gave incorrect information about an accident Tuesday involving a head-on crash between a police cruiser and a milk truck.

Police had said the cruiser hit a 15-foot-square excavation causing the car to cross the centre line and hit the oncoming truck.

The excavation was only about 14 to 15 inches wide, a police spokesman admitted.

Truck driver Donald France of Cobble Hill sustained minor bruises. The cruiser and the $20,000 truck are write-offs.

Regional probe panel includes Alf Hood

Former Victoria alderman Alf Hood is among five persons selected to carry out a probe into the role of regional government in B.C.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, who announced the examination of the regional government concept recently, named the five-member committee Wednesday to undertake the task.

In addition to Hood, it is made up of Phil Farmer of Kaleden, Rendina Hamilton of Penticton, Daphne Phillips of Dawson Creek, and Ron Thompson of Galiano Island.

Curtis said all have background knowledge of local governments and regional functions.

The regional government set-up has been under attack for some time. Like others of its kind in the province, the Capital Region has been the target of those who claim it is an arbitrary system that is proving too costly.

The committee is to hold hearings throughout the province and report to Curtis by early next year.

Impounded trawlers may be freed today

The two Soviet factory trawlers impounded since the weekend at Ogden Point for fishing violations may be on their way again today.

Whether the vessels Druzhba and Ugolnyy are untied to ply the open seas again depends on whether arrangements for a $250,000 bond can be worked out today, defence lawyer Peter Lowry said in a Vancouver telephone interview Wednesday night.

Capt. Irkov Karpitsky and Capt. Yarosla Nedelsky were charged in provincial court Tuesday with entering and fishing in Canadian waters without authorization.

The two charges carry fines of up to $25,000, with possible forfeiture of catch and gear.

The 250-foot factory trawlers were boarded by fisheries officers at the weekend and directed to Ogden Point. Fisheries ministry officers have remained aboard since the impounding.

Lowry said he didn't know what plea the skippers would enter when the trial starts Jan. 10.

Justice ministry lawyer Digby Kier said bond for release of the two ships had been set at $250,000. "I can't see it being reduced beyond that," he said.

Developer modifying Ten Mile Point plan

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Reporter

A review of plans for a proposed large housing development in the Ten Mile Point area is in progress, developer Gordon Rolston said Wednesday.

The announcement comes a few days after the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association presented a petition to Saanich council seeking abandonment of the two multi-storey buildings proposed as part of 210 units planned for the 70-acre site at Minnie Mountain.

Rolston, managing director of Broadmead Farms Ltd. said Wednesday a review of the over-all plan was nearly complete and a number of alternatives were being considered.

"We should be able to put all the pieces together very soon," he said.

The contentious proposal, subject of two stormy public hearings earlier this year, would have been two apartment buildings of five and eight storeys containing 66 suites, 62 townhouses and 82 single-family homes.

Rolston told Cadboro Bay residents in July that the multi-million-dollar development would be built over 10 years, with single-family homes included in the first phase.

He said it was necessary to include the apartment buildings to make the development economic.

Residents have argued that the proposed development would greatly change the atmosphere of the community.

They told aldermen that they had been successful so far in barring apartment development and wanted to keep it that way.

A petition signed by 445 Ten Mile Point residents objected to the density proposed and to the inclusion of multiple-family dwellings in a development planned in a single-family area, almost rural in its atmosphere.

A survey by the association showed residents favoring single-family homes and solidly opposed to high-rise apartments.

Single-family-only dwellings were favored by 93 residents completing a questionnaire circulated by the association, while 53 persons expressed a desire for a combination of single-family and multiple-family dwellings.

Of those favoring multiple-family buildings, 36 preferred townhouses of a maximum of two storeys; 19 favored maximum two-storey garden apartments; 14 favored cluster housing, maximum two-storeys, and 16 favored multi-storey buildings.

In his brief to council, association president Howard Sturrock said 89 per cent of residents polled were opposed to multiple-family dwellings higher than two storeys.

"We believe a development can be worked out which is advantageous to both residents and the developer," he said, "but this requires as a first step the abandonment of the two multi-storey blocks."

Sturrock said the association believed that the development proposed by Rolston could lead to the transformation of Cadboro Bay from its present quiet, uncrowded exclusively single-family state into a teeming, noisy, unattractive community.

Court slashes claim

A Victoria engineering company which sued in B.C. Supreme Court for $106,726 in unpaid accounts from a developer has been awarded $4,875.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan, in a 30-page judgment, said the developer, Park Pacific Apartments Ltd., is entitled to $3,105 on its counterclaim.

The action was launched by Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. and the case was heard in Victoria last May and June.

The suit was for unpaid accounts in connection with the Dean Park Estates housing development in North Saanich between 1972 and 1976.

Ruttan said his calculations "are subject to error" and he invited corrections from Rodney Taylor, counsel for Ker, Priestman and Cecil Branson, counsel for Park Pacific.

Ruttan said Ker, Priestman did not intend to charge on a percentage basis but on an hourly rate. But the company never communicated this information to the developer.

"They owed a duty to specify the terms of their hiring and never did so," he said.

But Park Pacific "owed a duty at least to itself to reach a more firm and clear understanding of their engineering contract. They started with no contractual understanding on fees at all . . ."

The result was that "there was no meeting of the minds and so no agreement on how fees were to be computed."

(This is a legal-Latin phrase for saying that a person is entitled to receive what he deserves or merits, if employed without a price being agreed on for services. The law considers the entitlement to be what is commonly paid in the particular locality for services of a like character).

Maple Leaf marchers recruiting

Currently recruiting members from girls in the 12-to-18-year age bracket, and community support, the group is renaming itself the Victoria All-Girls Ambassador Band.

Lessons will resume Oct. 1 at Belmont high school. Parents who want their daughters to learn music, marching and a sense of responsibility through attendance, practice, fund-raising and helping teammates are asked to contact organizer Dave Foster at 478-8793.
